Search underway for kidnapers

CHOWCHILLA, Calif. (AP) — Three men who engineered the bizarre kidnaping of 26 children and their school bus driver were mysteriously silent throughout most of the ordeal but may have slipped up by using one of their names in front of the victims.

Authorities issued an all-points bulletin Saturday for a "Jerry McCune" in connection with the case. They declined to say how they got the full name, but two of the victims said they heard one kidnaper address another as "Jerry."

There was no further identification of McCune.

Shivering and dazed, the children and driver returned from a 36-hour journey of terror Saturday and told of being buried alive by their abductors. They told of a nightmarish descent into a stiffling, earth-covered moving van which they believed was fashioned into their coffin.

"We didn't think we'd ever get out," said 11-year-old Michelle Robison as the children came to the police station to be questioned and fingerprinted Saturday. "I thought it was a joke at first, but I didn't when they put us in the vans."

Police wanted to identify the children's fingerprints so they could isolate any unidentified prints in their investigation.

Mike Marshall, the 14-year-old son of a rodeo performer, said, "We didn't know if they were going to be there pointing guns at our heads or what ... I thought we were going to die down there ...

"We were really sweating bad because we didn't have no air," said Mike, whose five hours of digging finally allowed the children and the driver to escape Friday night.

Mike also said that he and a friend heard one of the kidnapers call another kidnaper "Jerry."

An all-points bulletin was issued for three men believed traveling in two vans, one white and one medium blue, each with two CB radio antennas. Police also said they were looking for "Jerry McCune." One of the other kidnapers was described as 36 years old, with black urly hair, a chipped front tooth and a tattoo on his right forearm. The other was described as 27, with brown hair, blue eyes and a hairy mole on his right cheek.

The descrptions only deepened the mystery. It was not known how authorities obtained the detailed descriptions since the kidnapers reportedly wore stocking masks. And the APB's description of the vans conflicted with the description given by bus driver Edward Ray, who said one van was white and the other black, not medium blue.

"We thought we'd had it," Ray said. "The kids kept hollering, Why'd they do this to us?'

"I don't know either," the 55-year-old driver added.

As a statewide search was in progress for the three kidnapers and two vans, authorities allowed more than 100 reporters and photographers to view the bunker-like prison, buried six feet underground at the rear of a quarry near Livermore, 95 miles to the northeast toward San Francisco.

It consisted of a World War II vintage moving van equipped with a two ventilation tubes, two exhaust fans, a portable toilet, mattresses, bedding and food supplies.

"The roof was shored up with 4-by-4s," said Alameda County Sheriff Tom Houchins. "Whoever they were, they obviously took a great deal of time to fix it up."

Meanwhile, the FBI dropped out of the case, and Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. offered a $10,000 state reward for information leading to the arrests and convictions of the kidnapers.

Madera County Sheriff Ed Bates said the FBI was leaving the case "at this time" because there was no proof the kidnapers had crossed a state line. However, he said the bureau would continue to offer asssistance of its lab facilities.

The sheriff noted that the FBI "developed some very good investigative leads," but "motive is one of the areas where we have the least amount of information."

Authorities said no ransom request had been received, and they noted that Chowchilla is not an affluent town, nor did any terrorist group claim responsibility or demand a swap of political prisoners for the children.

"Welcome home, kids," said a placard at City Hall where the weary but unharmed children arrived in the moonlit predawn hours. They were greeted by whistles, cheers and tears from neighbors and kin who had waited through the night.

The children, ages 6 to 14, were rumpled and dirty, most of them lost in oversized prison jumpsuits hastily brought in to replace clothing taken by the kidnapers.

The driver of the chartered Greyhound bus which brought them home from Livermore, 95 miles to the north, said one small girl had a nightmare and cried out: "Please leave me alone!"

The youngest children were carried home asleep on a parents' shoulder. Older children trudged out unaided.

"They're great!" said a joyful mother. "I'm okay," murmured a teen-aged boy. But the fear that the kidnapers brought remained at sunrise.

Mayor Jim Dumas revealed that his wife, Lorene, received a telephone call soon after the children surfaced. An anonymous woman told her: "The children have been found, but it's not over. There will be others," then sobbed and hung up. The mayor said he hoped it was a crank call.

An all-points bulletin was issued for the three unidentified abductors and two Dodge vans, one black and one white, both with citizens band radio antennas.

Residents hailed the bus driver as a hero. Ray, the only adult victim, poured out the most complete details of the frantic underground hours in which he comforted sobbing children, poured water on their heat-parched bodies and clawed at the gravel and dirt he feared would entomb them.

He said about the only time the kidnapers spoke was to ask the name and age of each victim, and demand bits of their clothing.

'They didn't do much talking I ever heard," Ray said. "We tried to talk out and beg them, but I never heard an answer."

"I was hoping," he said, "but I guess nobody thought we were down there."

He said he believed they had saved their own lives in a determined escape, because air was getting scarce and the roof nearly caved in.

He said about the only time the kidnapers spoke was to ask the name and age of each victim, and demand bits of their clothing.

Top FBI official fired for 'abuses of power'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Director Clarence M. Kelley's dismissal of his top assistant in the FBI marks his first sharp response to one of two separate investigations by the Justice Department that could be more devastating than recent congressional inquiries.

The congressional probes brought headlines about abuses in the past, during the days of the late Director J. Edgar Hoover. But at least one of the Justice Department investigations raises the possibility of criminal charges in the present. And both have raised questions about Kelley's ability to control the bureau.

In a decision reached on a sickbed at Bethesda Naval Hospital, Kelley fired Associate Director Nicholas P. Callahan on Friday night — despite Kelley's own recent declaration that "I have no suspicions" about him.

Kelley is in the hospital for treatment of a painful back ailment.

Callahan, 62 and an FBI agent for 41 years, became a target of one of the two Justice Department investigations. This probe began after allegations of financial kickbacks in the FBI's purchase of electronic eavesdropping equipment.

However, the investigtion grew beyond kickbacks and began to involve abuses of power, department and FBI sources said.

House to return $200,000

CHARLESTON — Rep. Richard J. Rabbitt, Speaker of the Missouri House of Representatives and Rep. Fred DeField of Charleston, chairman of the House Accounts Committee, announced Friday that the House of Representatives would turn over more than $200,000 from the House Contingency Fund back into the state's general revenue fund.

With only a few June suplimentary expenses still to be paid, the House found it has a surplus of $215,227 remaining.

Speaker Rabbitt credited Rep. Defield and the accounts committee for their vigilance in managing the funds for the Missouri House of Representatives.

A special fund of $400 is set aside each month for each representative. The $200,000 represents the amount that was not used by the House members during the last fiscal year and will now revert back to general revenue.

"When the $400 a month plan was initiated, there were many people skeptical because of possible abuse, but with more than $200,000 being returned to general revenue, it proves most of the house members made a serious effort to only claim those expenses necessary to carry out the duties of being representative," Rabbitt said.

The $200,000 plus will now go into the state's general revenue fund much the same as if it were new money coming into the

Ford widens delegate lead

By The Associated Press

President Ford won all 35 Connecticut delegates t the Republican National Convention on Saturday, expanding his slim lead over challenger Ronald Reagan, while Reagan asked Utah's state convention to give him all of its 20 delegates.

The Connecticut state convention's action gave Ford a total of 1,66 national convention votes, bringing him within 64 votes of the GOP's nomination, compared with Reagan's 1,000, according to an Associated Press tally.

The two state conventions were the last in the party's delegate-selection process, leaving the two candidates only the 172 uncommitted delegates to fight over if one is to gain the 1,130 votes needed for the nomination before the national convention opens in Kansas City on Aug. 16.

Ford called for unity at the Connecticut convention in Hartford, to "center our attack not on fellow Republicans but on this Democratic Congress, the Democratic platform and the Democratic ticket which tries to be all things to all people.

"Now we must resolve to stop fighting each other and start helping each other."

It was his first political address since Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale won the Democratic presidential and vice presidential nominations on Thursday.

Ford got a rousing welcome at the Hartford convention, but outside the hall a group of about 50 Reagan supporters chanted "We want Reagan" and waved placards.

The Reagan camp claimed Connecticut party leaders had stacked the deck against them at the convention by refusing to give them 20 per cent of the delegation. They contended that proportion of the convention supported Reagan.

President Ford won all 35 Connecticut delegates t the Republican National Convention on Saturday, expanding his slim lead over challenger Ronald Reagan, while Reagan asked Utah's state convention to give him all of its 20 delegates.

The Connecticut state convention's action gave Ford a total of 1,66 national convention votes, bringing him within 64 votes of the GOP's nomination, compared with Reagan's 1,000, according to an Associated Press tally.

The two state conventions were the last in the party's delegate-selection process, leaving the two candidates only the 172 uncommitted delegates to fight over if one is to gain the 1,130 votes needed for the nomination before the national convention opens in Kansas City on Aug. 16.

Ford called for unity at the Connecticut convention in Hartford, to "center our attack not on fellow Republicans but on this Democratic Congress, the Democratic platform and the Democratic ticket which tries to be all things to all people.

"Now we must resolve to stop fighting each other and start helping each other."

It was his first political address since Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale won the Democratic presidential and vice presidential nominations on Thursday.

Ford got a rousing welcome at the Hartford convention, but outside the hall a group of about 50 Reagan supporters chanted "We want Reagan" and waved placards.

The Reagan camp claimed Connecticut party leaders had stacked the deck against them at the convention by refusing to give them 20 per cent of the delegation. They contended that proportion of the convention supported Reagan.

COLUMBIA--"The New Madrid Earthquakes of 1811-1812," just published by the University of Missouri Press, describes the series of earthquakes that jolted American frontier teriotroy in December 1811. The shocks, which continued through the winter, could be felt over an area of almost one million square miles. The epicenter was located in what is now southeastern Missouri and northeastern Arkansas.

Author James Penick Jr., professor of history at Loyola University in Chicago, draws on newspapers and other published accounts from that period. Those most affected--"male and female, educated and ignorant, preachers and sinners, scientists, rivermen, merchants, Indians and an undifferentiated assortment," he says--describe their brush with one of nature's fiercest forces.

Penick places these personal accounts into historical perspective and establishes for the first time a definitive chronology for such events as the destruction of New Madrid and the creation of Reelfoot Lake. in northwestern Tennessee. He deals with both the physical alterations of the river and such human concerns as the flow of commerce.

The various scientific theories for the severity, length and range of the earthquakes are explained. Penick also discusses the question of recurrence, offering both a scientific and historic point of view.

Mars here we come...

Viking landing is set for Tuesday

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — With little of the hoopla that attended America's moon landing just seven years ago, the United States will attempt on Tuesday a feat of space exploration in many ways more difficult and less assured of success.

Early in the morning, Viking 1 will attempt to land its small biology laboratory safely on the surface of Mars to conduct its automated tests and see whether there is life on the red planet.

More than 200 million miles away, hundreds of space engineers and scientists will wait in suspense as the unmanned probe falls toward the surface, hopefully for a safe, gentle landing.

As valuable as the probe is — more than eight years of planning and the country's most advanced technology — direct control of its landing is not possible because Mars is so distant that radio waves take 18 minutes to travel there from Earth.

Once released by the orbiting mother ship, the 2,000-pound lander will be guided by a computer as it falls toward its target area, switching on small rockets in the last few seconds to cushion its landing. Because of the radio lag, no one will know until 18 minutes after its touchdown whether it landed or crashed.

The ambitiousness of the billion-dollar mission reminds one Viking official of the myth of Daedalus and Icarus. That father and son fixed feathered wings to their arms with wax in attempting to fly, but the bolder Icarus flew too high and the sun melted his wings.

Kidnaping will alter life

Residents rejoice as children return

CHOWCHILLA, Calif.-AP-The "one big family" of residents in this tiny San Joaquin Valley farming community rejoiced as 26 of their children returned from a mysterious journey of fear.

But they worried that the starange kidnaping would alter their simple rural life forever.

"Now no one is going to trust anybody," said Glenda Mashburn. "We used to be able to leave the doors unlocked. But when something like this happens, it puts a scare in you." Pauline Tripp agreed, saying, "I raised four daughters here. We never had any fear when we sent them off to school. It's sad that you have to live in a place where you have suspicions."

Hundreds of residents gathered at the community fire station during the balmy Friday evening to await any word on the children, who had vanished more than 24 hours before on the way home from a summer school. Their bus had been found partially concealed in a dry creekbed.

The throng erupted with cheers, whistling and applause when authorities announced that the children had been found and were safe.

"As long as they're safe, I'm happy," said Bob Reynolds, whose two daughters were on the bus.

One young mother, hugging her 7-year-old daughter close to her, said, "I'm just so thankful, so thankful."

John Brown, whose son, Jeff, 10, and daughter, Jennifer, 9, were among the missing children, said he was "quite relieved, but I knew it would be just a matter of time."

Brown also aid his son was a talented young artist who might be able to provide authorities with a sketch of the abuductors.

Amidst the happy chaos of the firehouse, Marguerite Steyer, a Chowchilla resident for 60 years, described the community as "just as one big family." "We have our little barbecues, and in the spring, we put on a big spaghetti dinner to raise money for the kids in the band to go to a big parade in Long Beach," she said. "They've won many, many trophies, and when they come back everyone meets them and honks their horns."

Kirkpatrick downgrades primary plan

CAPE GIRADEAU, Mo. (AP) — Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick today took issue with the belief that a presidential primary is a more democratic method of selecting presidential nominating delegates than a caucus system.

In remarks prepared for delivery at a meeting of the House Interim Committee on a Presidential Primary, Kirkpatrick said, "We cannot imagine a more democratic nominating procedure than the one we have now -- local people nominating their neighbors for higher levels in the caucus system."

The committee is conducting hearings to determine whether a presidential primary is needed in Missouri, and if so, what form it should take.

As it stands now, both the Republican and Democratic parties choose their presidential nominating delegates through a local caucus and state convention system.

Kirkpatrick said more people do not "necessarily" vote in party primaries than participate in the caucuses.

"If a presidential prference primary is held on an otherwise nonelection day, the entire cost will be born by the state," Kirkpatrick said. He added that a special statewide election 10 years ago cost the state nearly $500,000 and that election costs have at least doubled since then.

Charleston adopts new school budget

CHARLESTON--The Charleston R-1 Board of Education adopted a budget for the 1976-77 school year and heard a report from board auditors during the July meeting at the board office.

Supt. Charles Rorex submitted a proposed budget for the next school year with expenditures estimated at $2,720,845. This figure does not include Title I (federal) expenditures, which Rorex stated are not determined at this time. Total expenditures in the system last were $3,196,902.

Rorex stated that in some areas expenditure would be reduced this year due to the installation of new equipment for the 1976-77 school year which was paid for in the past year's budget. The school also purchased buses this year for the district and will hot have that additional expense of some $40,000, Rorex said.

The board auditors were requested to attend the meeting last Thursday by board member Floyd Stallings.

The auditors, who are from a Cairo, Ill., firm, stated that to their knowledge the administration is handling the school's funds very well. "The internal control within the system is good," one auditor said. "The mone y is handled in the most practical way."

Stallings said that he had been told rumors that the district was losing money in some way. The auditors stated that all accounts are in order and that there are no losses.

The board reappointed Eleanor Hequembourg as secretary and renamed Robert Hearnes treasurer of the school board. The board voted unanimously to retain both employes.

The board considered the approval of the 1976-77 district newsletter which began last year under a federal program as a means of informing the public about school matters. The board chose to cut the newsletter from the budget this year in order to save some $2,000 involved in the production and mailing costs.

The district will continue to buy its propane from Harry Sutherland. The board received only two bids for the contract. Sutherland bid the curent price for propane of $30.9 cents, less a three-cent discount which would put the cost to the district at 27.9 cents. Small's LP Gas of Wyatt submitted a bid of 29.9 cents with option to increase the rate if prices rise.

The board voted down a proposal to cover the present bleachers at the Marshall Athletic Complex at Charleston High School with fiberglass caps. A bid for the north side of the bleachers had been submitted for $3,200. The covering of both north and south bleachers would cost over $5,0000. The proposal was dropped on a 3-3 vote.

The board adopted an amendment to the present board policy. The amendment reads: "Any employe who takes any school property for sale or personal use or who knowingly allows an individual to take school property for sale or personal use without proper authorization from the administration will be subject to loss of employment or other action by the Board of Education."

The amendment was adopted for legal purposes and was said to already be understood throughout the district. The insurance carried by the board for the district's teachers through the Missouri State Teachers Association will be carried again this year. The cost of the policies have increased nearly 50 per cent over last year. The cost was $13.29 per employe last year and this year it rose to $20.60 per employe.

In other business, the board discussed an appraisal of the Bertrand school property by Thomas Bennett, a local realtor. Bennett reported the value of the property to be $91,000. Though the appraisal looks rather high, Bennett said that figures were checked by two other appraisers and verified.

The board voted to call a special meeting in two weeks to discuss with Bertrand representatives what the wishes of the community are for the school property. The representatives will be three persons from the Lions club and three from the Board of Aldermen. No further action will be taken on property until after the meeting.

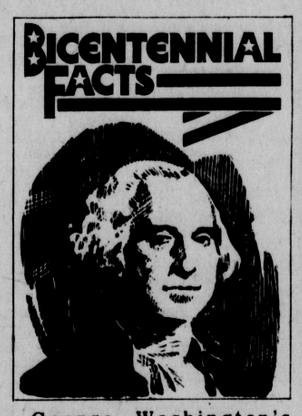
Board attorney Jeffrey Vaughan reported on two law suits facing the school district.

The first suit is one against the district filed by Alvin Cope, former district administrative assistant and teacher. In his suit, Cope argues that he was a tenured teacher at the time of his discharge from the district. He also argues that a 3-3 vote does not permit the board to dismiss a tenured teacher.

Another law suit has been filed against the district by Dorothy Drake, who claims she broke her ar m at the 1976 Man of the Year Banquet held in the CHS Commons this year. The suit claims Mrs. Drake slipped on wet tile and fell backwards, landing on her elbow, breaking her arm.

The board voted to accept resignations from Cerese Naile, CHS home economics teacher, and Oliver French, CHS English teacher.

The board approved the hiring of Mike Rockett as a junior high physical education instructor an d Eugene Frazier as a CHS science teacher.



George Washington's military achievements were never fully appreciated by his countrymen. What can not be denied, however, is that he stood firm during the greatest adversities when many other political and military figures turned away. His accomplishments were appreciated in Europe, The World Almanac notes, as exemplified by the British fleet's 20-gun salute upon word of his death.

Nation symbolis endangered species

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bald eagle, which overcame the opposition of Benjamin Franklin to become the national symbol of the wild, new United States of America, may soon be listed as an endangered species in the 48 contiguous states.

Interior Department officials are proposing that the bald eagle be listed as endangered in 43 states and as "threatened" in the other five.

The eagles have been shot, poisoned and chased from their traditional nesting grounds by the bulldozing progress of modern America, Interior Department officials said Wednesday.

"In some areas of the country the noble bird can't even hatch its own eggs. Pesticide residues have so contaminated its body that egg shells become thin and break when it tries to hatch them," said Keith M. Schreiner, associate director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Animals listed as endangered are protected by law from being killed, placed into commerce or possessed, except with government approval. A southern subspecies of bald eagle has been on the endangered list since 1967.

Interior officials said that in states where eagles are classified as a threatened species, controls can be either as stringent or more relaxed than in endangered-species states, depending on local conditions.

The bald eagle once ruled supreme in the United States and was chosen as the centerpiece of the seal of the fledgling new country in 1782. It was generally felt that the bird was a natural choice because its habitat was virtually the entire United States, although Franklin himself preferred the turkey.

Under the proposal by the Interior Department, the eagle will be protected in all states except Hawaii, where it is not a native bird, and Alaska, where it is considered plentiful in wilder areas.

"Only a single nesting pair of bald eagles remains in New York State where they used to be common and this pair didn't produce any offspring last year. The 33 pairs in Maine produced only 14 offspring," according to Schreiner.

The department said there are an estimated 10,000 nesting pairs of eagles in Alaska, but only about 700 pair in the rest of the country.

The board reappointed Eleanor Hequembourg as secretary and renamed Robert Hearnes treasurer of the school board. The board voted unanimously to retain both employes.

The board considered the approval of the 1976-77 district newsletter which began last year under a federal program as a means of informing the public about school matters. The board chose to cut the newsletter from the budget this year in order to save some $2,000 involved in the production and mailing costs.

The district will continue to buy its propane from Harry Sutherland. The board received only two bids for the contract. Sutherland bid the curent price for propane of $30.9 cents, less a three-cent discount which would put the cost to the district at 27.9 cents. Small's LP Gas of Wyatt submitted a bid of 29.9 cents with option to increase the rate if prices rise.

The board voted down a proposal to cover the present bleachers at the Marshall Athletic Complex at Charleston High School with fiberglass caps. A bid for the north side of the bleachers had been submitted for $3,200. The covering of both north and south bleachers would cost over $5,0000. The proposal was dropped on a 3-3 vote.

The board adopted an amendment to the present board policy. The amendment reads: "Any employe who takes any school property for sale or personal use or who knowingly allows an individual to take school property for sale or personal use without proper authorization from the administration will be subject to loss of employment or other action by the Board of Education."

The amendment was adopted for legal purposes and was said to already be understood throughout the district. The insurance carried by the board for the district's teachers through the Missouri State Teachers Association will be carried again this year. The cost of the policies have increased nearly 50 per cent over last year. The cost was $13.29 per employe last year and this year it rose to $20.60 per employe.

In other business, the board discussed an appraisal of the Bertrand school property by Thomas Bennett, a local realtor. Bennett reported the value of the property to be $91,000. Though the appraisal looks rather high, Bennett said that figures were checked by two other appraisers and verified.

The board voted to call a special meeting in two weeks to discuss with Bertrand representatives what the wishes of the community are for the school property. The representatives will be three persons from the Lions club and three from the Board of Aldermen. No further action will be taken on property until after the meeting.

Board attorney Jeffrey Vaughan reported on two law suits facing the school district.

The first suit is one against the district filed by Alvin Cope, former district administrative assistant and teacher. In his suit, Cope argues that he was a tenured teacher at the time of his discharge from the district. He also argues that a 3-3 vote does not permit the board to dismiss a tenured teacher.

Another law suit has been filed against the district by Dorothy Drake, who claims she broke her ar m at the 1976 Man of the Year Banquet held in the CHS Commons this year. The suit claims Mrs. Drake slipped on wet tile and fell backwards, landing on her elbow, breaking her arm.

The board voted to accept resignations from Cerese Naile, CHS home economics teacher, and Oliver French, CHS English teacher.

The board approved the hiring of Mike Rockett as a junior high physical education instructor an d Eugene Frazier as a CHS science teacher.

Nation symbolis endangered species

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bald eagle, which overcame the opposition of Benjamin Franklin to become the national symbol of the wild, new United States of America, may soon be listed as an endangered species in the 48 contiguous states.

Interior Department officials are proposing that the bald eagle be listed as endangered in 43 states and as "threatened" in the other five.

The eagles have been shot, poisoned and chased from their traditional nesting grounds by the bulldozing progress of modern America, Interior Department officials said Wednesday.

"In some areas of the country the noble bird can't even hatch its own eggs. Pesticide residues have so contaminated its body that egg shells become thin and break when it tries to hatch them," said Keith M. Schreiner, associate director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Animals listed as endangered are protected by law from being killed, placed into commerce or possessed, except with government approval. A southern subspecies of bald eagle has been on the endangered list since 1967.

Interior officials said that in states where eagles are classified as a threatened species, controls can be either as stringent or more relaxed than in endangered-species states, depending on local conditions.

The bald eagle once ruled supreme in the United States and was chosen as the centerpiece of the seal of the fledgling new country in 1782. It was generally felt that the bird was a natural choice because its habitat was virtually the entire United States, although Franklin himself preferred the turkey.

Under the proposal by the Interior Department, the eagle will be protected in all states except Hawaii, where it is not a native bird, and Alaska, where it is considered plentiful in wilder areas.

"Only a single nesting pair of bald eagles remains in New York State where they used to be common and this pair didn't produce any offspring last year. The 33 pairs in Maine produced only 14 offspring," according to Schreiner.

The department said there are an estimated 10,000 nesting pairs of eagles in Alaska, but only about 700 pair in the rest of the country.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

George Washington's military achievements were never fully appreciated by his countrymen. What can not be denied, however, is that he stood firm during the greatest adversities when many other political and military figures turned away. His accomplishments were appreciated in Europe, The World Almanac notes, as exemplified by the British fleet's 20-gun salute upon word of his death.

Second row: Bill McDowell, manager, Kenny Spitler, Kevin Self, Marty Williams , Rusty Greer, Gerald Buchannan, Dennis Fraser, Pat Collins, coach.

13-year-old Jr. BR Stars win

CHAFFEE — Sikeston's 13-year-old Junior Babe Ruth baseball team remained undefeated in the District tournament here Saturday night with a convincing 7-1 victory over Tri-County. Sikeston is the only undefeated team left in the tournament.

Kevin Self started on the mound for Sikeston's All-Stars and limited Tri-County to only one run in seven innings. Self had a shaky start as two errors and two walks in the bottom of the first inning produced the only run of the game for his opponents. Sikeston started the game against loser Black in the top of the first inning with two runs after the first two batters were retired. Self helped his own cause with a single. Marty Williams followed with a double and after Scott McDowell walked to fill the bases Rusty Greer hit a shot that the shortstop couldn't hold on to and two runs scored.

After a scoreless second inning Sikeston scored their third run as Rusty Greer batted it in after a walk, fielderschoice and stolen base put the runner in scoring position.

Self and the Sikeston defense was taking care of the Tri-County bats through the last six innings and Sikeston came up with their fifth run in the fifth frame. A walk, single and another intentional walk loaded the bases but the strategy backfired when Black made a wildpitch to the plate.

Sikeston scored their final three runs in the top of the seventh as an error, walk, single and an error produced the runs.

If Sikeston wins their game Sunday they will be the District champions but should they lose they will have to play again Monday night.

George Foster still streaking

CINCINNATI (AP) — Joe Morgan and George Foster drilled consecutive home runs in the the first inning, powering the Cincinnati Reds to a 4-1 victory over the Montreal Expos Saturday night as rookie right-hander Santo Alcala boosted his record to 8-2.

Morgan slammed a three-run homer and Foster followed with a solo shot to key a four-run outburst off Woodie Fryman, 8-7.

Alcala scattered five hits, including a solo homer by Andy Thornton in the second inning, as the Reds wrapped up their season series against the Expos by winning nine of 12 games.

Alcala, who made the Reds' spring roster because his minor league options had expired this year, struck out seven Expos and walked four, while posting his second complete game of the season.

Bluegill near record

JEFFERSON CITY--This may be the year of the big trout, but you'll never convince Virgil Zinser, Glencoe, of that.

Zinser caught a two pound, four ounce bluegill in a farm pond recently to earn himself a Master Angler award from the Department of Conservation. It is one of the largest bluegill ever caught in Missouri. The record is three pounds.

Zinser was using, nondramatically enough, a worm for bait.

But big trout did lead the way among the newest master anglers, with a thumping 11 pound, 12 ounce rainbow the top fish. Patricia Vangi, Council Bluffs, Iowa, caught it in Lake Taneycomo.

Other big trout included one 11 pounds, 11 ounces, caught by Bob Taylor, Strafford. Linda Cain, Richmond, had one 11:01, John Edler, St. Charles 9:02, Glenn Hause, Branson 8:12, Steve Edler, St. Charles 8:10 and Glenn Hause again, a seven pounder. All came from Taneycomo.

Largest fish among the newest Master Angler listings was a 33 pound drum caught by James Elsea, St. Ann. Larry Barraco Sr., of St. Louis, joined the club with a 1:08 redear sunfish and Kay Pendino, St. Louis, made it with a 1:06 redear.

Gary Burton, Gladstone, had the largest largemouth bass, eight pounds, 10 ounces, while Ray Starkey, Wetzville, caught one 8:09. Larry Parkhurst Jr., Sunrise Beach, had a 4:13 spotted bass, and Bill Polomsky, Lee's Summit, qualified with a 2:08 crappie.

Rhoden wins ninth game

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles right-hander Rick Rhoden singled home two runs in the fourth inning for his ninth straight victory and the Dodgers defeated the Chicago Cubs 5-4 Saturday night for Manager Walt Alston's 2,000th career win.

The Cubs jumped to a 4-0 lead against the Dodgers' undefeated right-hander on Rick Monday's 17th home run and Steve Swisher's bases-loaded double in the first inning.

But Rhoden, who allowed seven hits, held the Cubs in check after that, giving up just three hits after the first inning. At one point he retired 13 Cubs in a row.

Two teams end streaks

BALTIMORE (AP) — Bruce Bochte, Dave Chalk and Tommy Davis each drove in two California runs, pacing a 7-3 victory which snaped the five game losing streak of the Angels Saturday night and stopped Baltimore's winning streak at six.

An infield out by Bochte and Chalk's single accounted for two runs in the second inning, and both drove in runs with singles in the fourth for a 4-0 lead.

The Angels, who had lost eight in a row to the Orioles, tallied three more in the fifth on two bunt singles, three stolen bases, an RBI single by Bobby Bonds and a two-run safety by Davis.

Frank Tanana, 11-6, benefited from an 11-hit California attack in the first 41-3 innings against loser Rudy May, 6-7, and Ross Grimsley. Rookie Fred Holdsworth, Baltimore's third pitcher, retired 14 in a row in his major league debut.

Lee May hit his 15th home run in the fourth for Baltimore.

1976 Olympics get underway with 7,000 entered

MONTREAL (AP) — A butterfly duel between Billy Forrester of the United States and Roger Pyttel of East Germany highlights the first day of competition Sunday when the 21st Summer Olympic Games begin after weeks of bitter political wrangling.

The awesome East German women swimmers are expected to win the 400-meter medley relay for the only other swimming gold medal to be awarded on the first day of action.

The athletes finally take the stage after the Games have been sullied by bitter international political fights that resulted in the withdrawal of teams from the Republic of China and several African nations.

Still, about 7,000 athletes from 110 nations will compete for the gold, silver and bronze medals that mark the height of athletic accomplishment in 21 summer sports. The Soviet Union, United States and the two Germanys are expected to dominate the medal standings.

Swimming takes the early spotlight in these games, with the track and field events not scheduled to start until next Friday. The American men could win all 13 of their swim events and U.S. coach Doc Counsilman said "Every event will have a new world record except the 100-meter butterfly."

Likewise, the East German women swimmers could win all their events, but an American team will try to block that possibility Sunday in the medley relay. Linda Jezek of Palo Alto, Calif., will swim the 100 meter backstroke leg of the event; Lauri Siering of Modesto, Calif., will swim the breaststroke; Camille Wright of New Albany, Ind., the butterfly, and Shirley Babashoff of Fountain Valley, Calif., the freestyle anchor leg.

Miss Babashoff, 19, is the American superstar hope in swimming but she will have difficulty upstaging East Germany's Kornelia Ender, who holds world records in the 100- and 200-meter freestyle events.

If the East Germans win the event, as expected, it will be that nation's first gold medal ever in women's swimming.

The 200-meter butterfly duel between Forrester of Birmingham, Ala., and East Germany's Pyttel could start the American men swimmers to the sweep they dream of. Forrester won the world championship in Cali, Columbia, in 1975 and Pytell holds the world record in the event. Mike Bruner of Stockton, Calif., has a good chance for a medal in the race.

The American and Russian basketball teams, which are expected to meet eventually for the gold medal, both get started in preliminary competition Sunday. The Americans, who lack the big center but have great speed and some outstanding pro prospects, take on Italy in the first round. Russia meets Mexico.

The United States won every Olympic basketball gold medal until 1972 in the Munich Games, when the title was virtually stolen from them in one of the Games' most bitter controversies ever. The United States apparently had won by one point but the officials required that the last three seconds played over, and then played over again until Russia finally scored and won, 51-50.

Aleksandr Belov, the man who scored that basket, is back on the Russian team along with 19-year-old Vladimir Tkachenko, who stands 7-foot-3.

U.S. coach Dean Smith of North Carolina has four of his own players plus such standouts as college player the year Scott May of Indiana, his teammate, Quinn Buckner, and Adrian Dantley of Notre Dame.

Gymnastics also gets under way Sunday with 14-year-old Rumanian prodigy Nadia Comaneci expected to grab the spotlight. American hopes in this sport hinge on Cardrie Englert, 18, of Tallahassee, Fla., who says she has nightmares about falling off the balance beam, and on Peter Kormann, 20, a junior Southern Connecticut State College.

Miss Englert, a national champion in both the free exercise and the beam, said, "You can practice and practice but there is always the chance you will fall off the beam. For sure, it's the most nerve-wracking event."

Van Winitsky wins Jr. tennis

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Tony Giammalva of Houston defeated Van Winitsky of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 6-4, 6-1, Saturday in the Boys-18 singles final of the St. Louis Junior Invitational Tennis Tournament.

"The big thing is the confidence that I'll have now," said the sixth seeded Giammalva. "By winning here I should have a little edge in Kalamazoo," where the "big tournament," the U.S. Tennis Association national tournament, is scheduled in three weeks.

The girls-18 singles was taken by Lea Antonoplis of Glendora, Calif., 6-3, 4-6, 6-3, over Stacy Margolin of Berkeley, Calif.

Barry Stagner, left, and Clif Piper, both 10, display a 3½-foot sand shark that they caught in a creek behind their homes in Arlington. They were fishing for catfish when the shark took a plastic worm bait. Most people think someone in the neighborhood who had gone fishing in the Gulf of Mexico put the shark in the creek when they returned home. (AP Wirephoto)

Saints win ninth straight game, 7-5

The Sikeston Saints rode the bats of John Leible, Jim Saulter and Bruce Lawrence to victory, their eighth in a row, 7-5 over the Ste. Genevieve Yankees at V.F.W. Stadium Saturday night. It wasn't a typical flawless performance by either side, but the Bi-State squads did give the fans their money's worth.

If y ou like pitching: Sikeston righthander Don Miller was riding high until felled by a finger blister and a flurry of Saints' errors in the seventh. Entering that inning the hard-throwing righty had permitted the visitors just one runner, on a bad-hop single to left in the second. But, three errors, combined with three hits, gave the Yanks enough offense to tie score at five-apiece.

If you are a devote of defense: Sikeston rightfielder Donnie Taylor raced into rightcenter to flag down a drive off the bat of Mike Kistner in the fourth. Taylor dove at the last moment, flying parallel to the ground, to amake the back-handed stab.

And, if hitting is your bag: You would have been more than pleased with the offensive showings by both sides against a pair of quality pitchers. Sikeston reached Don Buechting, a SEMO University product, for 11 hits. Much of Buechting's problems stemmed from his own team's fielding lapses. Ste. Geneiveve made seven errors.

The three players mentioned in this story's first paragraph furnished most of the Saints' offense. They combined for eight of the 11 safeties, scoring seven runs and driving in five. Most important, the three combined for two crucial runs in the bottom of the eighth. That broke the 5-5 tie and gave Miller the win when Richard Blankenship protected the lead in the ninth.

Saulter capped a two-for-four evening with a towering double to left, opening the deighth. Then, John Leible came through with a game-winning hit in a late inning at situation for the third time this year. Leible, who has had three such chances and has given his team victory every time, had a perfect three-for-three evening. . Bruce Lawrence then drove in an insurance run, driving Leible in withone out.

Sikeston's record resides at 9-5, 7-5 in league play and yet another league game on top for Sunday afternoon. The Saints conclude their season's series with Anna at 2 p.m. this afternoon. They have taken two of the three previous meetings.

But, three errors, combined with three hits, gave the Yanks enough offense to tie score at five-apiece.

If you are a devote of defense: Sikeston rightfielder Donnie Taylor raced into rightcenter to flag down a drive off the bat of Mike Kistner in the fourth. Taylor dove at the last moment, flying parallel to the ground, to amake the back-handed stab.

And, if hitting is your bag: You would have been more than pleased with the offensive showings by both sides against a pair of quality pitchers. Sikeston reached Don Buechting, a SEMO University product, for 11 hits. Much of Buechting's problems stemmed from his own team's fielding lapses. Ste. Geneiveve made seven errors.

The three players mentioned in this story's first paragraph furnished most of the Saints' offense. They combined for eight of the 11 safeties, scoring seven runs and driving in five. Most important, the three combined for two crucial runs in the bottom of the eighth. That broke the 5-5 tie and gave Miller the win when Richard Blankenship protected the lead in the ninth.

Saulter capped a two-for-four evening with a towering double to left, opening the deighth. Then, John Leible came through with a game-winning hit in a late inning at situation for the third time this year. Leible, who has had three such chances and has given his team victory every time, had a perfect three-for-three evening. Bruce Lawrence then drove in an insurance run, driving Leible in withone out.

Sikeston's record resides at 9-5, 7-5 in league play and yet another league game on top for Sunday afternoon. The Saints conclude their season's series with Anna at 2 p.m. this afternoon. They have taken two of the three previous meetings.

Rhoden wins ninth game

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles right-hander Rick Rhoden singled home two runs in the fourth inning for his ninth straight victory and the Dodgers defeated the Chicago Cubs 5-4 Saturday night for Manager Walt Alston's 2,000th career win.

The Cubs jumped to a 4-0 lead against the Dodgers' undefeated right-hander on Rick Monday's 17th home run and Steve Swisher's bases-loaded double in the first inning.

But Rhoden, who allowed seven hits, held the Cubs in check after that, giving up just three hits after the first inning. At one point he retired 13 Cubs in a row.

Two teams end streaks

BALTIMORE (AP) — Bruce Bochte, Dave Chalk and Tommy Davis each drove in two California runs, pacing a 7-3 victory which snaped the five game losing streak of the Angels Saturday night and stopped Baltimore's winning streak at six.

An infield out by Bochte and Chalk's single accounted for two runs in the second inning, and both drove in runs with singles in the fourth for a 4-0 lead.

The Angels, who had lost eight in a row to the Orioles, tallied three more in the fifth on two bunt singles, three stolen bases, an RBI single by Bobby Bonds and a two-run safety by Davis.

Frank Tanana, 11-6, benefited from an 11-hit California attack in the first 41-3 innings against loser Rudy May, 6-7, and Ross Grimsley. Rookie Fred Holdsworth, Baltimore's third pitcher, retired 14 in a row in his major league debut.

Lee May hit his 15th home run in the fourth for Baltimore.

Bluegill near record

JEFFERSON CITY--This may be the year of the big trout, but you'll never convince Virgil Zinser, Glencoe, of that.

Zinser caught a two pound, four ounce bluegill in a farm pond recently to earn himself a Master Angler award from the Department of Conservation. It is one of the largest bluegill ever caught in Missouri. The record is three pounds.

Zinser was using, non-dramatically enough, a worm for bait.

But big trout did lead the way among the newest master anglers, with a thumping 11 pound, 12 ounce rainbow the top fish. Patricia Vangi, Council Bluffs, Iowa, caught it in Lake Taneycomo.

Other big trout included one 11 pounds, 11 ounces, caught by Bob Taylor, Strafford. Linda Cain, Richmond, had one 11:01, John Edler, St. Charles 9:02, Glenn Hause, Branson 8:12, Steve Edler, St. Charles 8:10 and Glenn Hause again, a seven pounder. All came from Taneycomo.

Largest fish among the newest Master Angler listings was a 33 pound drum caught by James Elsea, St. Ann. Larry Barraco Sr., of St. Louis, joined the club with a 1:08 redear sunfish and Kay Pendino, St. Louis, made it with a 1:06 redear.

Gary Burton, Gladstone, had the largest largemouth bass, eight pounds, 10 ounces, while Ray Starkey, Wetzville, caught one 8:09. Larry Parkhurst Jr., Sunrise Beach, had a 4:13 spotted bass, and Bill Polomsky, Lee's Summit, qualified with a 2:08 crappie.

1976 Olympics get underway with 7,000 entered

MONTREAL (AP) — A butterfly duel between Billy Forrester of the United States and Roger Pyttel of East Germany highlights the first day of competition Sunday when the 21st Summer Olympic Games begin after weeks of bitter political wrangling.

The awesome East German women swimmers are expected to win the 400-meter medley relay for the only other swimming gold medal to be awarded on the first day of action.

The athletes finally take the stage after the Games have been sullied by bitter international political fights that resulted in the withdrawal of teams from the Republic of China and several African nations.

Still, about 7,000 athletes from 110 nations will compete for the gold, silver and bronze medals that mark the height of athletic accomplishment in 21 summer sports. The Soviet Union, United States and the two Germanys are expected to dominate the medal standings.

Swimming takes the early spotlight in these games, with the track and field events not scheduled to start until next Friday. The American men could win all 13 of their swim events and U.S. coach Doc Counsilman said "Every event will have a new world record except the 100-meter butterfly."

Likewise, the East German women swimmers could win all their events, but an American team will try to block that possibility Sunday in the medley relay. Linda Jezek of Palo Alto, Calif., will swim the 100 meter backstroke leg of the event; Lauri Siering of Modesto, Calif., will swim the breaststroke; Camille Wright of New Albany, Ind., the butterfly, and Shirley Babashoff of Fountain Valley, Calif., the freestyle anchor leg.

Miss Babashoff, 19, is the American superstar hope in swimming but she will have difficulty upstaging East Germany's Kornelia Ender, who holds world records in the 100- and 200-meter freestyle events.

If the East Germans win the event, as expected, it will be that nation's first gold medal ever in women's swimming.

The 200-meter butterfly duel between Forrester of Birmingham, Ala., and East Germany's Pyttel could start the American men swimmers to the sweep they dream of. Forrester won the world championship in Cali, Columbia, in 1975 and Pytell holds the world record in the event. Mike Bruner of Stockton, Calif., has a good chance for a medal in the race.

The American and Russian basketball teams, which are expected to meet eventually for the gold medal, both get started in preliminary competition Sunday. The Americans, who lack the big center but have great speed and some outstanding pro prospects, take on Italy in the first round. Russia meets Mexico.

The United States won every Olympic basketball gold medal until 1972 in the Munich Games, when the title was virtually stolen from them in one of the Games' most bitter controversies ever. The United States apparently had won by one point but the officials required that the last three seconds played over, and then played over again until Russia finally scored and won, 51-50.

Aleksandr Belov, the man who scored that basket, is back on the Russian team along with 19-year-old Vladimir Tkachenko, who stands 7-foot-3.

U.S. coach Dean Smith of North Carolina has four of his own players plus such standouts as college player the year Scott May of Indiana, his teammate, Quinn Buckner, and Adrian Dantley of Notre Dame.

Gymnastics also gets under way Sunday with 14-year-old Rumanian prodigy Nadia Comaneci expected to grab the spotlight. American hopes in this sport hinge on Cardrie Englert, 18, of Tallahassee, Fla., who says she has nightmares about falling off the balance beam, and on Peter Kormann, 20, a junior Southern Connecticut State College.

Miss Englert, a national champion in both the free exercise and the beam, said, "You can practice and practice but there is always the chance you will fall off the beam. For sure, it's the most nerve-wracking event."

Van Winitsky wins Jr. tennis

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Tony Giammalva of Houston defeated Van Winitsky of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 6-4, 6-1, Saturday in the Boys-18 singles final of the St. Louis Junior Invitational Tennis Tournament.

"The big thing is the confidence that I'll have now," said the sixth seeded Giammalva. "By winning here I should have a little edge in Kalamazoo," where the "big tournament," the U.S. Tennis Association national tournament, is scheduled in three weeks.

The girls-18 singles was taken by Lea Antonoplis of Glendora, Calif., 6-3, 4-6, 6-3, over Stacy Margolin of Berkeley, Calif.

Youth bowling tourney

WICHITA,Kan. (AP) — Four youths won their way into the national All America Youth Bowling championships with victories Saturday in the West Central Regional tournament in Wichita.

The results:

Boys open division--Lance Lorfield, Davenport, Iowa., defeated Glen Moen, Minot,N.D., 193 to 151.

Girls open division--Susan Myer, Alexandria, Minn., defeated Tim Sherwood, Wichita, 195 to 172.

Cardinals whip Padres

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Righthander John Denny hurled a four-hitter Saurday to spark the St. Louis Cardinals to a 7-1 National League victory over the San Diego Padres.

Denny struck out three and walked two enroute to his fourth complete game as he improved his record to 5-4.

Second baseman Mike Tyson led a 13-hit Cardinals attack against five Padres pitchers with four singles and an RBI.

The loss was the seventh straight for the Padres, marking their longest losing streak of the season.

Denny held San Diego scoreless until two were out in the ninth. Dave Winfield singled and came home on Johnny Grubb's double. Before that, Denny had yielded only two hits.

The Cardinals moved out to a 3-0 lead in the second inning off Padre starter and loser Dave Freisleben.

Ted Simmons led off with a single and Willie Crawford moved him to third with a double. Hernandez scored Simmons on a groundout to second and, after Tyson singled home Crawford, a two-out single by Denny brought in Tyson.

St. Louis extended its lead to 4-0 in the fourth on singles by Hernandez and Tyson and a forceout by Hector Cruz. For the fifth Cards run, Lou Brock singled in Bake McBride in the seventh and Hernandez doubled in two more runs in the ninth.

Denny, who lost to the Padres earlier this season 5-1, had a no-hitter going until, with two outs in the fifth inning, Fred Kendall lined a single to left. Denny also collected two of his team's hits.

"We're just not generating any offense," said Padre manager John McNamara after his team was defeated for the 18th time in its last 25 games.

"All we can do is keep swinging the bat until we battle ourselves out of this thing."

"I'm encouraged by the pitching we've gotten in all three games against the Padres," said Cardinals Manager Red Schoendienst. The Cards swept the three-game series here.

Brett homers for KC

KANSAS CITY (AP) — George Brett, the American League's leading hitter, belted a Luis Tiant pitch into the right field bullpen leading off the ninth-inning Saturday, giving the Kansas City Royals a 2-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Tiant, 10-7, held the Royals to six hits until Brett, batting .365, came through with his fifth homer of the year. Mark Littell relieved Andy Hassler at the start of the sixth inning and struck out five while running his record to 6-3.

The Royals, leaders in the American League West, scratched out one run off Tiant in the fourth when Amos Otis singled and scored on John Mayberry's double. 2boston tied it in the sixth on two walks and a single by Rick Burleson.

The victory, Kansas City's ninth in 12 games, gave them a 4-1 lead over the Red Sox in their six-game series which concludes Sunday.

Andy Hassler, the hard-luck left-hander who started for the Royals, turned in a well-executed, gutty performance but remained perilously close to one of sports' most embarassing records.

His 17 straight losses, dating back to April 29, 1975, are just two short of the American League record. He left with a slight muscle pull in his left leg while nursing a 1-0 lead after five innings.

If Littell had managed to shut out the Sox the rest of the way Hassler, who says he's getting tired of people talking about his losing streak, would have gotten th victory.

In his first start with the Royals against Catfish Hunter and the New York Yankees, he suffered a similar fate, pitching well but getting no decision. Hassler had dressed and disappeared from the clubhouse by the game's end.

Defensive captain Ralph Baker of the New York Jets says the 1975 season will be his last as a player. He's been a top linebacker 11 seasons.

Army and Holy Cross will have their 10th football meeting since 1914 when they play at West Point on Sept. 13.

Dollar Bill Bradley probes athletes live

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. — (NEA) — Bill Bradley, the Rhodes scholar forward of the New York Knicks, has written a marvelous book, probing the inner psyche of the professional athlete.

"While their physical skill lasts," writes Bradley, "professional athletes are celebrities — fondled and excused, praised and believed. Only toward the end of their careers do the stars realize their sense of identity is insufficient. . . . In my case, I've been preparing for the end since my first year, but even so I can only hope that I will manage easily the withdrawal from what Phil Jackson calls 'my addiction.'"

These thoughts were poignantly brought to mind the other day when the phone rang, and the voice on the other end boomed out sonorously, "This is Cookie . . . you know, Carlton Chester Gilchrist." An old friend.

Cookie Gilchrist had been one of those professional athletes who was a celebrity. In the early years of the fledgeling American Football League, striving for respectability, he was the greatest of fullbacks. He did not have the credentials of a Jim Brown, his contemporary, but there were valid claims he was a better all-around football player. He was the AFL's first star of national stature in the pre-Namath days.

He was also contentious and congenial, the former quality making him a football itinerant who was shunted from Buffalo (where he had his peak years) to Denver to Miami, the latter quality making him a delight for writers.

In 1968, peddled once again to Cincinnati, his bad knee throbbing, Cookie Gilchrist quit abruptly at the age of 33.

"There comes a time in every man's life," he said, "when he must sacrifice fame and glory for a productive role in the business and social community."

Cookie Gilchrist is now 41 years old. He looks good. His weight is at 240 pounds, even lighter than when he played. His smile glows as it always did. He doesn't drink or smoke and even abstains from caffeine. He carries around a Bible in his shoulder bag which is well-thumbed and which he says he reads every day.

The years since he stopped playing have been rough for him.

His marriage, to a Russian girl in Toronto had already broken up. His two boys live in Canada with their mother and aren't the least interested in athletics. His liaison with one of the most famous black models in America broke up after a couple of years because, she told Cookie, he couldn't support her in the style she was used to.

That really blew his mind. "You say you love me," he said to her, "but I'm not a good enough man for you." He got into a dope trip, popping pills. He sampled cocaine. He drank. He had started a C.G. Mayd Services, Ltd., for domestics, in Denver and that had gone under.

Three years ago, Gilchrist took stock of himself.

"You've got to be more than a football player," he had once said. "You've got to be a person."

He looked around and realized that his own adjustment from what Bradley calls "the mixed blessing of notoriety" to "that inexorable terror of living without the game" was not a phenomenon, nor even unique. Lenny Ford, who was voted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame last year, died drunk and broke in a rundown hotel. Bob Ferguson, an All-American fullback at Ohio State, slipped into obscurity and was rediscovered during a two-week coma, from which he is now making a painful recovery.

The dilemma has not been restricted to the black athlete. Jackie Jensen found conversion to the real life of the non-athlete a traumatic experience. Even Jerry West, the Laker great who has retired economically fixed for life, is emotionally strung out — what do you do with your day after you've played 36 holes? on the golf course?

Three years ago, Cookie began work with an organization called The United Athletes Coalition of America and Canada. The purpose is to help athletes rehabilitate after their playing days are over, to get them in the mainstream of society or into youth work, a logical extension of their own lives.

"The comedown for too many is hard and fast," he says.

His program has been endorsed in the Congressional Record by Congressman Jack F. Kemp, who was his teammate and quarterback with the Buffalo Bills when they won the AFL championship.

But for three years, Cookie has had problems getting the non-profit organization off the ground. The problems are essentially money. People tell him, "That's nice, what you're trying to do." But no one comes forth with the bankroll.

Part of the problem is Cookie. As a player, his main hassles with management were over money. He was supposed to be unmanageable and intractable. The stigma whether deserved or not, lingers. "He is suffering from his reputation," says O.J. Simpson. "It catches up with you."

So Cookie has had to rely on himself to keep his dream going. He estimates that he has gone $100.000 in debt.

But he persists in his plans to establish rural training centers for former athletes, in northern California, and allied youth camps.

To meet criticism that he has no professional expertise in this area — he didn't even go to college, jumping straight from high school in Brackenridge, Pa., to the Canadian League — he is accepting a fellowship at the University of California at San Diego. It was proferred by Dr. Arnold J. Mandell, the psychiatrist who is persona non grata with the pro football establishment for his controversial year spent counseling the San Diego Chargers on drugs and other problems.

Cookie plans to attend the university in the late summer and fall and will study psychotherapy methods. He wants to show, most of all, that he can be the guinea pig for the transition of glorified athlete to everyday citizen.

Black nations boycott Olympics

MONTREAL (AP) — African countries, 22 in all, pulled out of the Olympics en masse Saturday, depriving the Games in last-minute decisions of some of the world's best athletes and leaving the rebel nations with the threat of international sport sanctions.

There were divisions among the Africans themselves, and suspense gripped the Olympic stadium as teams marched in for the opening ceremony. A missing pllace symbolized an eleventh-hour decision to boycott the competition because New Zealand, accused of coddling the segregationist South African government, would not withdraw its team as the Africans demanded.

Most of the African athletes reacted with stoicism to the pull-out decisions, but a few, bucking possible reprisals at home, indicated they were disgusted by their governments actions.

The 22 African teams—joined by Iraq in a gesture of solidarity—were out of the Games in a movement that gathered momentum Saturday morning.

The teams to leave Saturday, joining Tanzania, Somalia, Madagascar, Mauritius, Gambia and Nigeria, which had announced previously they would not participate, were: Algeria, Kenya, Uganda, Ethiopia, Republic of the Congo, Zambia, Egypt, Central African Republic, Gabon, Ghana, Libya, Niger, Sudan, Togo, Upper Volta and Zambia.

The wheatear is the only American land bird that regularly migrates between North America and Africa.

Missouri deer hunters will have primarily a bucks-only season Nov. 13-21, but four of the state's 12 management zones (Units Five, Six, Nine and 12) will have antlerless deer quotas. Hunters can apply for antlerless deer permits in those zones between Sept. 3-Oct. 15. Details on application will be issued by the Department of Conservation before Aug. 1. His 17 straight losses, dating back to April 29, 1975, are just two short of the American League record. He left with a slight muscle pull in his left leg while nursing a 1-0 lead after five innings.

If Littell had managed to shut out the Sox the rest of the way Hassler, who says he's getting tired of people talking about his losing streak, would have gotten th victory.

In his first start with the Royals against Catfish Hunter and the New York Yankees, he suffered a similar fate, pitching well but getting no decision. Hassler had dressed and disappeared from the clubhouse by the game's end.

Defensive captain Ralph Baker of the New York Jets says the 1975 season will be his last as a player. He's been a top linebacker 11 seasons.

Army and Holy Cross will have their 10th football meeting since 1914 when they play at West Point on Sept. 13.

Dollar Bill Bradley probes athletes live

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. — (NEA) — Bill Bradley, the Rhodes scholar forward of the New York Knicks, has written a marvelous book, probing the inner psyche of the professional athlete.

"While their physical skill lasts," writes Bradley, "professional athletes are celebrities — fondled and excused, praised and believed. Only toward the end of their careers do the stars realize their sense of identity is insufficient. . . . In my case, I've been preparing for the end since my first year, but even so I can only hope that I will manage easily the withdrawal from what Phil Jackson calls 'my addiction.' "

These thoughts were poignantly brought to mind the other day when the phone rang, and the voice on the other end boomed out sonorously, "This is Cookie . . . you know, Carlton Chester Gilchrist." An old friend.

Cookie Gilchrist had been one of those professional athletes who was a celebrity. In the early years of the fledgeling American Football League, striving for respectability, he was the greatest of fullbacks. He did not have the credentials of a Jim Brown, his contemporary, but there were valid claims he was a better all-around football player. He was the AFL's first star of national stature in the pre-Namath days.

He was also contentious and congenial, the former quality making him a football itinerant who was shunted from Buffalo (where he had his peak years) to Denver to Miami, the latter quality making him a delight for writers.

In 1968, peddled once again to Cincinnati, his bad knee throbbing, Cookie Gilchrist quit abruptly at the age of 33.

"There comes a time in every man's life," he said, "when he must sacrifice fame and glory for a productive role in the business and social community."

Cookie Gilchrist is now 41 years old. He looks good. His weight is at 240 pounds, even lighter than when he played. His smile glows as it always did. He doesn't drink or smoke and even abstains from caffeine. He carries around a Bible in his shoulder bag which is well-thumbed and which he says he reads every day.

The years since he stopped playing have been rough for him.

His marriage, to a Russian girl in Toronto had already broken up. His two boys live in Canada with their mother and aren't the least interested in athletics. His liaison with one of the most famous black models in America broke up after a couple of years because, she told Cookie, he couldn't support her in the style she was used to.

That really blew his mind. "You say you love me," he said to her, "but I'm not a good enough man for you." He got into a dope trip, popping pills. He sampled cocaine. He drank. He had started a C.G. Mayd Services, Ltd., for domestics, in Denver and that had gone under.

Three years ago, Gilchrist took stock of himself.

"You've got to be more than a football player," he had once said. "You've got to be a person."

He looked around and realized that his own adjustment from what Bradley calls "the mixed blessing of notoriety" to "that inexorable terror of living without the game" was not a phenomenon, nor even unique. Lenny Ford, who was voted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame last year, died drunk and broke in a rundown hotel. Bob Ferguson, an All-American fullback at Ohio State, slipped into obscurity and was rediscovered during a two-week coma, from which he is now making a painful recovery.

The dilemma has not been restricted to the black athlete. Jackie Jensen found conversion to the real life of the non-athlete a traumatic experience. Even Jerry West, the Laker great who has retired economically fixed for life, is emotionally strung out — what do you do with your day after you've played 36 holes? on the golf course?

Three years ago, Cookie began work with an organization called The United Athletes Coalition of America and Canada. The purpose is to help athletes rehabilitate after their playing days are over, to get them in the mainstream of society or into youth work, a logical extension of their own lives.

"The comedown for too many is hard and fast," he says.

His program has been endorsed in the Congressional Record by Congressman Jack F. Kemp, who was his teammate and quarterback with the Buffalo Bills when they won the AFL championship.

But for three years, Cookie has had problems getting the non-profit organization off the ground. The problems are essentially money. People tell him, "That's nice, what you're trying to do." But no one comes forth with the bankroll.

Part of the problem is Cookie. As a player, his main hassles with management were over money. He was supposed to be unmanageable and intractable. The stigma whether deserved or not, lingers. "He is suffering from his reputation," says O.J. Simpson. "It catches up with you."

So Cookie has had to rely on himself to keep his dream going. He estimates that he has gone $100,000 in debt.

But he persists in his plans to establish rural training centers for former athletes, in northern California, and allied youth camps.

To meet criticism that he has no professional expertise in this area — he didn't even go to college, jumping straight from high school in Brackenridge, Pa., to the Canadian League — he is accepting a fellowship at the University of California at San Diego. It was proferred by Dr. Arnold J. Mandell, the psychiatrist who is persona non grata with the pro football establishment for his controversial year spent counseling the San Diego Chargers on drugs and other problems.

Cookie plans to attend the university in the late summer and fall and will study psychotherapy methods. He wants to show, most of all, that he can be the guinea pig for the transition of glorified athlete to everyday citizen.

Black nations boycott Olympics

MONTREAL (AP) — African countries, 22 in all, pulled out of the Olympics en masse Saturday, depriving the Games in last-minute decisions of some of the world's best athletes and leaving the rebel nations with the threat of international sport sanctions.

There were divisions among the Africans themselves, and suspense gripped the Olympic stadium as teams marched in for the opening ceremony. A missing pllace symbolized an eleventh-hour decision to boycott the competition because New Zealand, accused of coddling the segregationist South African government, would not withdraw its team as the Africans demanded.

Most of the African athletes reacted with stoicism to the pull-out decisions, but a few, bucking possible reprisals at home, indicated they were disgusted by their governments actions.

The 22 African teams—joined by Iraq in a gesture of solidarity—were out of the Games in a movement that gathered momentum Saturday morning.

The teams to leave Saturday, joining Tanzania, Somalia, Madagascar, Mauritius, Gambia and Nigeria, which had announced previously they would not participate, were: Algeria, Kenya, Uganda, Ethiopia, Republic of the Congo, Zambia, Egypt, Central African Republic, Gabon, Ghana, Libya, Niger, Sudan, Togo, Upper Volta and Zambia.

Berkmeyer and MacGee favored

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — When the 38th annual Women's Missouri Golf Association tournament begins Monday at Hickory Hills Country Club, the big question will be can anyone stop Barbara Berkmeyer and Karen MacGee.

Between them, Berkmeyer of St. Louis and MacGee of Kansas City have won the last four state titles and six of the past eight, making them co-favorites to take home another championship flight trophy. Berkmeyer has finished first four times while MacGee holds a record six titles.

Berkmeyer also has the added incentive of becoming the first golfer to win three straight titles since Mrs. O.S. Hill of Kansas City did so in the first three years of the tournament, 1935-37.

The threat to end the Berkmeyer-MacGee dominance will be headed by Marcella Rose, a two-time winner from St. Louis, and Cathy Reynolds of Springfield. Among former champions scheduled to compete are Mary Gail Dalton of St. Louis and Peggy Ludlow of Kansas City.

The 18-year-old Reynolds, who played in the number two spot behind Nancy Lopez on the nationally-ranked Tulsa University's women's team this past season as a freshman, has an added advantage of playing on her home course.

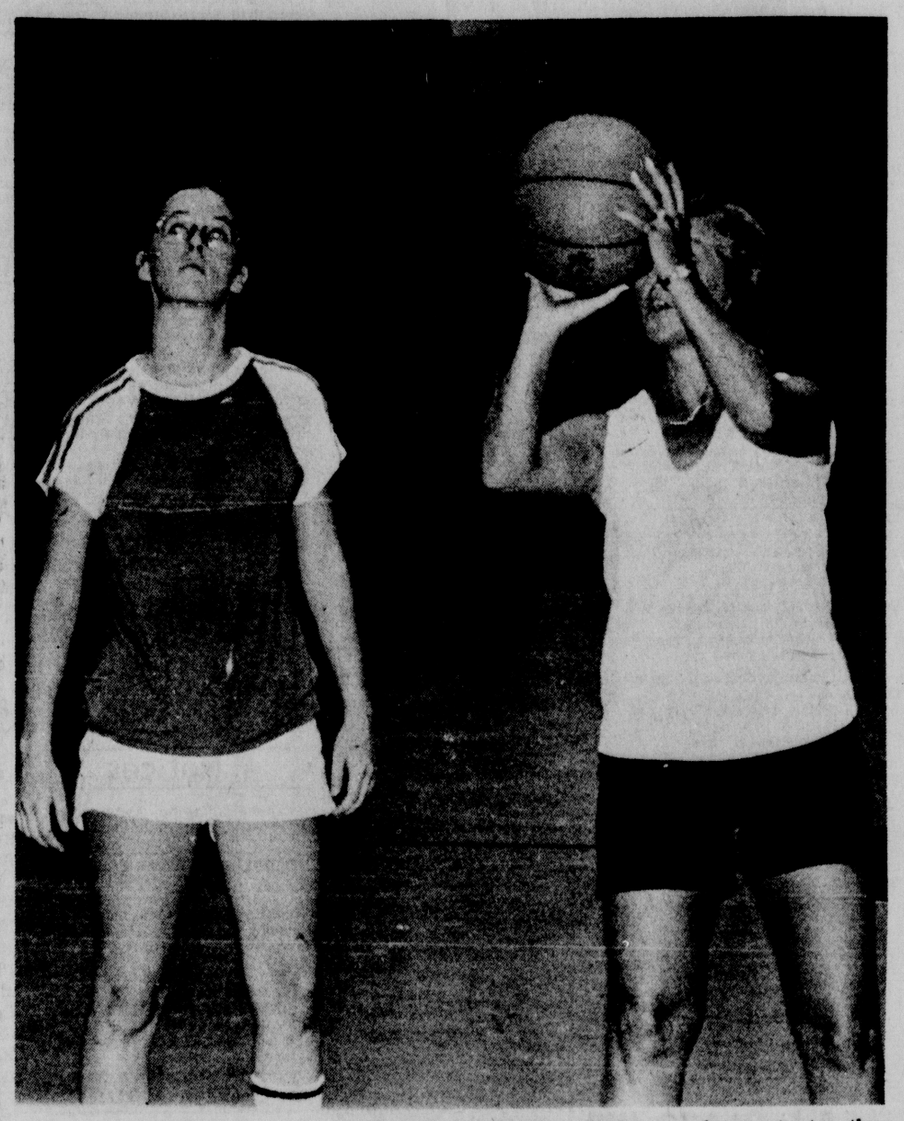
Reynolds, a three-time Missouri Junior Girls' champion who finished second to MacGee in the 1973 state tournament, holds the course record for women with a one-under-par 71. However, that round came while playing from the championship tees which makes the course 6,703 yards—almost 800 yards more than what the field will compete from in Monday's qualifying.

The field of 176 golfers open Monday with an 18-hole stroke play qualifying round to determine the breakdown of players in each flight. Championship flight will have 32 players, while the rest will have 16 each.

Golfers begin match play Tuesday with the first loss demoting players to consolation action and the second setback elimination.

Finals in each flight will be held Saturday, with championship flight going 36 holes and the other divisions 18.

At 5,915 yards, Hickory Hills is not an excessively long course. Yet it is designed to reward good shots and penalize bad ones. The course has a history of bulging scores with treacherous roughs and tricky greens. Tournament officials have indicated that they will allow the heavy rough to grow throughout the tournament.



Sikeston High School's girls basketball coach, Connie Spears demonstrates the proper technique used to shoot free throws to basketball prospect Patty Holt. Mrs. Spears is conducting a basketall camp for girls which will end next Friday. Sikeston is building a girls basketball program to start in the 1976-77 season.

Cedeno homers

NEW YORK (AP) — Cesar Cedeno smacked a solo homer, his 15th of the season, with two out in the first inning, and Houston rookie Joaquin Andujar outdueled Tom Seaver as the Astros beat the New York Mets 1-0.

Cedeno's drive hit just above the orange line on the brick wall adjacent to the visiting team's bullpen in left field.

The loss lowered Seaver's record to 9-6 and was his first after four consecutive wins. Seaver last lost on June 9th.

Giants beat Phils

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — John Montefusco pitched a five-hitter and Larry Herndon hit a two-run single Saturday, leading the San Francisco Giants to a 4-1 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Herndon's single came with the bases loaded in the second inning against Philadelphia starter Tom Underwood, 5-2, and gave the Gints a 3-0 lead. Montefusco, 8-8, struck out five batters without a walk.

The Phillies' only run came in the sixth on Dave Cash's infield single and Larry Bowa's triple.

The Phillies had gone scoreless for 17 consecutive innings before getting their run off Montefusco.

Many countries absent from 21st Olympiad

MONTREAL (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II of Great Britain formally opened the summer Olympics Saturday, facing almost 7,000 athletes under grey, cloudy skies as a crowd of 73,000 watched in person and a billion more around the world viewed the event on television.

"I declare open the Olympic Games of Montreal celebrating the XXI Olympiad of the modern era," said the Queen. Eight trumpets blared and 80 girls representing the temple virgins who accompanied the athletes into the stadium in ancient times formed the figure 80. That commemorated the 80th year of the modern Olympic era.

The Queen, wearing a coral outfit, sat with her husband, Prince Philip, through an opening pageant that lasted more than two hours. Her role was small but the significance of it was great. She spoke the 15 words in French and English in deference to this predominantly French-speaking province.

The Queen and Prince Philip had entered the stadium promptly at 3 p.m. EDT to a cheer from the sellout crowd. A bouquet of flowers was on the red podium in front of her in the royal box. A trumpet call sounded and Canada's national anthem resounded through the stadium, signaling the start of the colorful parade of athletes.

Pursuant with tradition, the little delegation from Greece, the country in which the Olympics originated, led the parade of athletes—some 7,000 of them from about 100 nations.

The original list was reduced by the last-minute withdrawal of Taiwan and the defection of numerous African nations protesting the entry of New Zealand.

After Greece, other countries paraded in alphabetical order under their French names.

Thus, the first on the red tartan track was Allemagne, namely West Germany.

The West Germans presented an imposing squad, the women in white jackets and dark skirts and the men in dark coats and gray slacks.

The Saudi Arabians appeared in Arabic dress with ankle length robes and white burnooses. Also according to tradition, the flag bearers dipped their colors as they passed the royal box.

Australia paraded in canary yellow dresses for the women and yellow coats and green slacks for the men.

Queen Elizabeth stood in the royal box and seemingly recognized every group which passed.

One of the first predominately-black teams was that from The Bahamas, a 15-member delegation in blue-and-white costumes. The Bahamaians were followed by Barbados, also with a large section of black athletes.

The black nations which deserted the Games had sought other black athletes, including those from the United States, to follow the boycott.

Each of the teams was preceded by a woman in white hoisting the team's official name. These placard carriers represented the vestal virgins who performed similar duties in the ancient Games in Greece.

One of the smallest squads to make an appearance was Belize, with two gray-haired officials and one athlete following the flag.

The Brazilians, a large squad, paraded informally and waved at the crowd as they rounded the track.

The first black African country to make an appearance was Cameroon, attired in full pastel blue robes and red turbans. At this point, only Algeria had failed to answer the roll call.

Killanin clapped his hand, his first demonstration of emotion, when the Cameroon delegation paraded in front of his box.

The Republic of Congo was the second African nation that failed to appear, but the Ivory Coast marched as scheduled.

Cuba made an impressive showing with a large contingent of both men and women nattily attired in white suits and red tam o'shanters. The Cubans waved individual flags.

Egypt also failed to put a team in the opening ceremony.

Football revival at Hall of Fame game

CANTON, Ohio AP-A revival of the first defeat of a National Football League team by a member of the old American Football League will be held July 24 when the Denver Broncos play the Detroit Lions in the fourth annual Pro Football Hall of Fame game.

Denver upset the Lions in an exhibition game 13-7 in 1967 before the two leagues merged.

Erroll Mann, the place-kicker for Denver whose two field goals gave the Broncos the first AFL victory over an NFL team, is now a member of the Lions.

Three new members will be voted into the hall prior to the game, bringing the membership to 88. Inducted will be: Ray Flaherty, who amassed an 8-37-5 coaching record over ten scores seasons with the Redskins in Boston and Washington in the NFL and the old New York Yankees in the former All America Football Conference starting in 1936. He also played nine seasons as an end with the New York Giants.

Jim Taylor, a bruising fullback of the Green Bay Packers under the late Coach Vince Lombardi in the 1960s. Taylor amassed 8,597 yards rushing, 10,538 combined net yards, caught 225 passes and scored 558 points on 93 touchdowns in nine years with the Packers. Lombardi was inducted in 1961.

The late Lenny Ford, a defensive end for the powerful Cleveland Browns after coming from the Los Angeles Dons of the AAFC in 1950. Ford was elected by the hall committee for his prowess as a defender and pass rusher.

Graham leads Westchester

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP)— Steady David Graham, the transplanted Australian, fired a one-under-par 70 Saturday for a three round total of 12-under 201 and a four stroke lead in the $300,000 Westchester Classic.

The 30-year-old Graham, a winner in this country only at Cleveland in 1972, shared the lead in the first round of this 72 hole test after an eight under 63, and took a four stroke lead after 36 holes with a three under 68.

The slim built Graham, a golf club designer who now resides in Hollywood, Fla., carded three birdies and two bogeys in his Saturday round over the 6,603-yard par 71 Westchester Country Club course. He leads Mike Wynn of Crittendon, Va., who has earned $1,966 this year and is seriously considering giving up the tour if he doesn't do better.

The 31-year-old Wynn, whose best finish since joining the pro tour in 1972 was 12th at Houston last year, hung in with a one-under par 70, including three birdies and two bogeys.

Wynn, who has made only five cuts in 21 tournaments entered, shot a first round 64 to trail by a stroke, and a par 71 Friday for a 36 hole total of 135 that tied him with Carlton White and Larry Ziegler. His 70 Saturday left him at eight-under par 205.

Ben Crenshaw, a double winner on the tour this year and the third leading money winner, shot a third round 69 for a 206, five strokes off the lead. Crenshaw, who was tied for third with Ziegler, who shot a 71 Saturday, would be within two strokes of Graham if not for a triple bogey on the seventh hole in Friday's second round when he put the ball in the water.

DeField explained the efforts of the accounts committee by saying, "Each member of the committee watched over the money appropriated to the operation of the House as if we were operating our own business. We worked at holding down expenses and we were able to show the savings."

Rabbitt and DeField both stated that the large savings would not have been possible without over-all cooperation from House members.

DeField said the contingency fund was set up because some House members were abusing the posted mileage and telephone privileges, but that the contingency fund made each representative accountable for his own expenses.

PCA wins district award

Sikeston PCA wins top award

The Sikeston Production Credit Association was awarded the 6th Farm Credit District's trophy for being the No. 1 association in the district for the year 1975. The trophy was received by the president and board of directors at district directors and officers conference held July 8-10 Stouffer's Riverfront Towers in St. Louis.

Over 1,450 PCA directors, personnel and wives attended the conference from Missouri, Illinois and Arkansas.

Other PCA personnel attending the conference were Marilyn Dement, Ken and Nancy Williams, Wallace and Vivian Waters, Gordon and Mary Hill LaVerne Wright and Ken and Mary Lou Walters of Sikeston; Fred and Jo Alexander and Jim and Mary Gosche of Portageville; Carolyn Fowler of New Madrid; Ray and Florence Edmonds and Bill Chambers of Charleston; Alberta B' hop of East Prairie; Bill and Neva Settles, Tom and Carmen Love and Peggy Causey of Dexter; Curtis and Faye Robb, Fred Higdon and Thelma Kalkbrenner of Poplar Bluff; Doyle Oehl of Jackson; and Rudy and Maxine Breezeel of Advance.

The district trophy is competed for each year by 44 PCA's across the 6th District. This is the second consecutive year the Sikeston association has received this trophy. The criteria for winning the trophy is based upon acceptable credit quality, other credit-related services and the association's service of farm credit in its designated area.

In addition to receiving the trophy, Gold Awards for high indiviudual unit performances were presented to Ray Edmonds for the Charleston unit;, Gordon Hill for the Sikeston unit;, Bill Settles for the Dexter unit, and Fred Alexander received a Silver Award for the Portageville unit.

The Gold Award , being the highest award for unit performance, was presented to only eight branch offices in the district. The Silver Award, the next level of performance, was presented to 11 branch offices in the district.

In receiving the trophy, Wright stated, "This is an award for the PCA members for their high performance of financial management, acceptable credit quality and an outstanding job of farming in Southeast Missouri." The trophy will be rotated to the seven branches of fices during the 1976 year.

Congress had the oportunity to attend sessions concerning farm credit on the state and national levels and the expanding role of farm credit and heard a special panel discuss farm commodities and forward pricing.

A special Bicentennial banquet and ball kicked the conference off to a rousing start. During the evening hours many attended the opera, "Fiddler On The Roof", or attended the Cardinals vs. Dodgers baseball game.

Glen Ludwig, manager of the commodity hedging department of the Illinois Grain Corp., at Bloomington, Ill., predicted domestic use of corn will improve, but exports will not exceed last year. He estimated this year's carry-over corn crop will double last year's, and said he expects farmers will receive about $2.30 to $2.50 per hundred weight this fall.

He said soybeans will be two million bushels less than last year and domestic use will be about 60 per cent. Presently, Russia has purchased five times more than it said it would. He said the price is and will be volatile, the peak will be early and he expects the average price to range from $5.50 to $6.50 per bushel during harvest.

He thinks Brazil will get big in wheat production and not be as strong a competitor in soybeans. Last year's top price at harvest time was $4.50 per bushel at Southeast Missouri markets.

Gilbert Novotny, president of National Stockyards, predicted hogs that are selling for $51 cwt. presently will drop to $44 by September and $40 by December. Live beef cattle that are presently selling for 39 cents per pound will increase to 41 cents by fall, and No. 3 dressed cattle that are now selling for 59 cents will increase to 75 cents in the very near future.

Novotny has just returned from the western states and found feedlots only about one-half of capacity and one large feed lot has gone out of business recently.

Both the pessimists and the optimists may be right about the stock market.

The former contend the long-term investor has to be mighty lucky to make any money.

And the latter say the Dow Jones Industrials may move above 1100 by 1977.

Even so, argue the pessimists, such an advance doe s not guarantee much of a capital gain for individual stocks.

Technicians in numerous instances agree that the basic direction of the market is "up," but that the speed of the climb resembles a snail.

From Dec. 29, 1975 to mid-March this year, the DJI zoomed like a rocket from about 850 or so to roughly 1,015, reaching a median barrier which thus far has held. Thus a move above 1100 by 1977 hardly would be dramatic, compared to the big percentage gain of early 1976.

Mid-South Securities and Exchange Commission registered equity analysts emphasize that short-term traders see no compulsive motivation for jumping into the current market as they did early this year.

Long-termers well may push the market considerably higher, they concede. Traders are looking for bargains which promise quick profits, investment bankers note. And last December and early this year the market was in an oversold state.

That the economic recovery probably has a "considerable way to go" is rather widely accepted among stockbrokers--barring unforeseen catasthophes. However, they mention the historical fact that the stock market usually "leads" the recovery and that after the big move, traders, by tradition, are extremely wary of commitment to equity.

The First National Bank of Chicago, confirming the strength of the expanding economy, notes that loan demand is beginning to rise.

"Consumer purchases have continued to pace the expansion," says the bank," and if confirmation is sought in loan figures, it certainly is there. Consumer installment credit in the last four months has increased at an annual rate of over 7 per cent. Early this year, the recovery was accompanied by strong capital markets.

"The marked rise in stock and bond trading was financed heavily by commercial banks. Another substantial advance in loans outstanding has occurred in the real estate category."

The populace, it would seem, is borrowing and spending at an accelerated pace--indicative of a rising economy.

In terms of stock market investment for the long-term, SEC-registered investment counselor s go back to the conservative approach of looking for equity in established businesses or institutions which are severely depressed.

Thus, a number of their group, both in Memphis and St. Louis, look favorable at this time on Union Planters Corp., the famed old Mid-South bank holding company.

Union Planters has had problems, they concede; hence its depressed price, trading over the counter around 6-7, with the purchase a likely 7¼ to 7½.

During the past year traders have made money on Union Planters, as it reached 11½ during 1975. Book value, according to Standard & Poor's , was $19.18 per share, as of Sept. 390, 1975. Your stockbroker could get an update.

Another stock, possibly worthy of study and analysis and also very possibly an quity to stay out of, according to some SEC-registered analysts, is equity Amoskeag Co., trading over the counter around 22½-24½, with an equity per share value of $79.87 as of Dec. 3, 1974, according to the March Standard & Poor's Stock Guide this year.

Any brokerage house can provide an update on this holding company and investment house which has been paying a dividend since 181928.

W. Delbert Woolsey of Sikeston has been appointed plant manager of the Federal Compress & Warehouse Co. facility at 802 W. North St. effective July 1. Woolsey replaced Kenneth Glidewell, who was transferred to the Federal plant at Forrest City, Ark.

Woolsey began his career with Federal Compress in September 1952 at the Lilbourn plant. In August 1973, he moved to the Blytheville, Ark., plant where he stayed until November 1974. At that time he was sent to the Sikeston plant and appointed assistant plant manager under Glidewell.

Woolsey is a past master of Lilbourn Masonic Lodge No. 666, and he and his wife Alene live at 1810 Garwood Ave. and have two sons, Roger, who lives at home and Randall of Blytheville.

Colley has served in the post for six months, having been appointed to fill a vacancy in that office last January. Colley is also education chairman of the local organization.

The Sikeston Life Underwriters Association is made up of professional life insurance representatives from the Sikeston, Charleston, East Prairie, Portageville, New Madrid, Malden, Gray Ridge and Lilbourn area.

Affiliated with both the Missouri and national life underwriter organizations, the Sikeston association strives to improve public knowledge of the concept and uses of legal reserve life insurance and to improve the quality of business written by its members and assist in upholding all state and federal laws affecting life and health insurance.

During the last year, the local association experienced a 20 per cent increase in membership and sponsored a visit by the Missouri commissioner of insurance to Sikeston for a seminar, sponsored a sales seminar attended by some 100 sales representatives and some of the biggest names in the life insurance business and joined with the state association to sponsor a high school essay contest as well as sponsoring the Life Underwriter Training Council courses on life insurance locally.

Big K reports record sales

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Kuhn's-Big K Stores Corp. reported record sales and net earnings for the first half of 1976, with net earnings soaring 208.8 per cent on a sales increase of 31.8 per cent.

Kuhn's-Big K Stores Corp. president Jack W. Kuhn announced the operating results following a July 9 directors meeting in which the board declared the regular cash dividend of two and one-half cents per share of common stock. The dividend is payable Aug. 2, 1976 to stockholders of record July 23, 1976.

In another announcement, Kuhn said the company has signed leases to operate two new Big K discount department stores, one in Central City, Ky., an another near Shawmut-Lanett, Ala. Additionally, Kuhn said, the company expects to have a signed lease in the next few days to operate a Big K discount department store at a former W. T. Grant location in Demopolis, Ala.

For the six-month period ending June 30, 1976, Kuhn's-Big K Stores Corp. posted sales of $90,380,035, up from $68,565,810 recorded in the comparable period a year ago. Net earnings for the period reached $772,000, or 28 cents per share, an increase over the $250,000, or nine centers per share, for the first half of 1975.

For the second quarter, the Nashville-based discount department store chain reported sales of $53,077,738, a gain of 28.9 per cent over the $41,177,595 recorded in the same period of 1975. Net income for the quarter just ended amounted to $1,034,000, up 24.4 per cent over the $831,000 reported in the corresponding quarter a year ago. On a per share basis, net earnings for the second quarter were 40 cents, compared to 33 cents for the same period in the previous year.

Earnings per share for the first half and second quarter of 1975 have been restated to reflect the three-for-two stock split declared by the board of directors in April this year.

Kuhn said sales for the month of June rose 21.8 per cent to $16.3 million up from $13,380,000 recorded in the same month a year ago.

The new Central City Big K store, to consist of 40,250 square feet, is to be located on Highway 62 near the Western Kentucky Parkway. The Shawmut-Lanett Big K will also be a 40,250 square foot store and will be situated in Chambers Square Shopping Center on Highway 29. Both new Big K stores are scheduled for completion during the second quarter of 1977.

T. R. McGuire, left, president of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of St. Louis, presents the 6th Farm Credit District No. 1 trophy to the Sikeston Production Credit Association. Holding the trophy for the Sikeston PCA members are Charles Causey, third from left, of Dexter chairman of the board of directors, and Robert Wright, second from right, of Sikeston, president. Other members looking on, from left, are E. E. Dement of Sikeston, Louis Kalkbrenner of Poplar Bluff, Ray Fowler of New Madrid and Jim Bishop of East Prairie.

Sikeston PCA wins top award

The Sikeston Production Credit Association was awarded the 6th Farm Credit District's trophy for being the No. 1 association in the district for the year 1975. The trophy was received by the president and board of directors at district directors and officers conference held July 8-10 Stouffer's Riverfront Towers in St. Louis.

Over 1,450 PCA directors, personnel and wives attended the conference from Missouri, Illinois and Arkansas.

Other PCA personnel attending the conference were Marilyn Dement, Ken and Nancy Williams, Wallace and Vivian Waters, Gordon and Mary Hill LaVerne Wright and Ken and Mary Lou Walters of Sikeston; Fred and Jo Alexander and Jim and Mary Gosche of Portageville; Carolyn Fowler of New Madrid; Ray and Florence Edmonds and Bill Chambers of Charleston; Alberta B' hop of East Prairie; Bill and Neva Settles, Tom and Carmen Love and Peggy Causey of Dexter; Curtis and Faye Robb, Fred Higdon and Thelma Kalkbrenner of Poplar Bluff; Doyle Oehl of Jackson; and Rudy and Maxine Breezeel of Advance.

The district trophy is competed for each year by 44 PCA's across the 6th District. This is the second consecutive year the Sikeston association has received this trophy. The criteria for winning the trophy is based upon acceptable credit quality, other credit-related services and the association's service of farm credit in its designated area.

In addition to receiving the trophy, Gold Awards for high indiviudual unit performances were presented to Ray Edmonds for the Charleston unit;, Gordon Hill for the Sikeston unit;, Bill Settles for the Dexter unit, and Fred Alexander received a Silver Award for the Portageville unit.

The Gold Award , being the highest award for unit performance, was presented to only eight branch offices in the district. The Silver Award, the next level of performance, was presented to 11 branch offices in the district.

In receiving the trophy, Wright stated, "This is an award for the PCA members for their high performance of financial management, acceptable credit quality and an outstanding job of farming in Southeast Missouri." The trophy will be rotated to the seven branches of fices during the 1976 year.

Congress had the oportunity to attend sessions concerning farm credit on the state and national levels and the expanding role of farm credit and heard a special panel discuss farm commodities and forward pricing.

A special Bicentennial banquet and ball kicked the conference off to a rousing start. During the evening hours many attended the opera, "Fiddler On The Roof", or attended the Cardinals vs. Dodgers baseball game.

Glen Ludwig, manager of the commodity hedging department of the Illinois Grain Corp., at Bloomington, Ill., predicted domestic use of corn will improve, but exports will not exceed last year. He estimated this year's carry-over corn crop will double last year's, and said he expects farmers will receive about $2.30 to $2.50 per hundred weight this fall.

He said soybeans will be two million bushels less than last year and domestic use will be about 60 per cent. Presently, Russia has purchased five times more than it said it would. He said the price is and will be volatile, the peak will be early and he expects the average price to range from $5.50 to $6.50 per bushel during harvest.

He thinks Brazil will get big in wheat production and not be as strong a competitor in soybeans. Last year's top price at harvest time was $4.50 per bushel at Southeast Missouri markets.

Gilbert Novotny, president of National Stockyards, predicted hogs that are selling for $51 cwt. presently will drop to $44 by September and $40 by December. Live beef cattle that are presently selling for 39 cents per pound will increase to 41 cents by fall, and No. 3 dressed cattle that are now selling for 59 cents will increase to 75 cents in the very near future.

Novotny has just returned from the western states and found feedlots only about one-half of capacity and one large feed lot has gone out of business recently.

Where the telescope ends...

"Where the telescope ends, the microscope begins, . Which of the two has the grander view?"

...Victor Hugo

Both the pessimists and the optimists may be right about the stock market.

The former contend the long-term investor has to be mighty lucky to make any money.

And the latter say the Dow Jones Industrials may move above 1100 by 1977.

Even so, argue the pessimists, such an advance doe s not guarantee much of a capital gain for individual stocks.

Technicians in numerous instances agree that the basic direction of the market is "up," but that the speed of the climb resembles a snail.

From Dec. 29, 1975 to mid-March this year, the DJI zoomed like a rocket from about 850 or so to roughly 1,015, reaching a median barrier which thus far has held. Thus a move above 1100 by 1977 hardly would be dramatic, compared to the big percentage gain of early 1976.

Mid-South Securities and Exchange Commission registered equity analysts emphasize that short-term traders see no compulsive motivation for jumping into the current market as they did early this year.

Long-termers well may push the market considerably higher, they concede. Traders are looking for bargains which promise quick profits, investment bankers note. And last December and early this year the market was in an oversold state.

That the economic recovery probably has a "considerable way to go" is rather widely accepted among stockbrokers--barring unforeseen catasthophes. However, they mention the historical fact that the stock market usually "leads" the recovery and that after the big move, traders, by tradition, are extremely wary of commitment to equity.

The First National Bank of Chicago, confirming the strength of the expanding economy, notes that loan demand is beginning to rise.

"Consumer purchases have continued to pace the expansion," says the bank," and if confirmation is sought in loan figures, it certainly is there. Consumer installment credit in the last four months has increased at an annual rate of over 7 per cent. Early this year, the recovery was accompanied by strong capital markets.

"The marked rise in stock and bond trading was financed heavily by commercial banks. Another substantial advance in loans outstanding has occurred in the real estate category."

The populace, it would seem, is borrowing and spending at an accelerated pace--indicative of a rising economy.

In terms of stock market investment for the long-term, SEC-registered investment counselor s go back to the conservative approach of looking for equity in established businesses or institutions which are severely depressed.

Thus, a number of their group, both in Memphis and St. Louis, look favorable at this time on Union Planters Corp., the famed old Mid-South bank holding company.

Union Planters has had problems, they concede; hence its depressed price, trading over the counter around 6-7, with the purchase a likely 7¼ to 7½.

During the past year traders have made money on Union Planters, as it reached 11½ during 1975. Book value, according to Standard & Poor's , was $19.18 per share, as of Sept. 390, 1975. Your stockbroker could get an update.

Another stock, possibly worthy of study and analysis and also very possibly an quity to stay out of, according to some SEC-registered analysts, is equity Amoskeag Co., trading over the counter around 22½-24½, with an equity per share value of $79.87 as of Dec. 3, 1974, according to the March Standard & Poor's Stock Guide this year.

Any brokerage house can provide an update on this holding company and investment house which has been paying a dividend since 181928.

Big K reports record sales

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Kuhn's-Big K Stores Corp. reported record sales and net earnings for the first half of 1976, with net earnings soaring 208.8 per cent on a sales increase of 31.8 per cent.

Kuhn's-Big K Stores Corp. president Jack W. Kuhn announced the operating results following a July 9 directors meeting in which the board declared the regular cash dividend of two and one-half cents per share of common stock. The dividend is payable Aug. 2, 1976 to stockholders of record July 23, 1976.

In another announcement, Kuhn said the company has signed leases to operate two new Big K discount department stores, one in Central City, Ky., an another near Shawmut-Lanett, Ala. Additionally, Kuhn said, the company expects to have a signed lease in the next few days to operate a Big K discount department store at a former W. T. Grant location in Demopolis, Ala.

For the six-month period ending June 30, 1976, Kuhn's-Big K Stores Corp. posted sales of $90,380,035, up from $68,565,810 recorded in the comparable period a year ago. Net earnings for the period reached $772,000, or 28 cents per share, an increase over the $250,000, or nine centers per share, for the first half of 1975.

For the second quarter, the Nashville-based discount department store chain reported sales of $53,077,738, a gain of 28.9 per cent over the $41,177,595 recorded in the same period of 1975. Net income for the quarter just ended amounted to $1,034,000, up 24.4 per cent over the $831,000 reported in the corresponding quarter a year ago. On a per share basis, net earnings for the second quarter were 40 cents, compared to 33 cents for the same period in the previous year.

Earnings per share for the first half and second quarter of 1975 have been restated to reflect the three-for-two stock split declared by the board of directors in April this year.

Kuhn said sales for the month of June rose 21.8 per cent to $16.3 million up from $13,380,000 recorded in the same month a year ago.

The Shawmut-Lanett Big K will also be a 40,250 square foot store and will be situated in Chambers Square Shopping Center on Highway 29. Both new Big K stores are scheduled for completion during the second quarter of 1977.

The Demopolis Big K store will contain 53,373 square feet and will be located in the newly named Big K Plaza Shopping Center at the intersection of Highways 80 and 43. The unit is expected to be in operation by mid-August.

Crop condition is critical in Scott County

By JOHN D. GARRETT
Area Agronomy Specialist

BENTON--An early spring is not always good for farmers. This year is a good example. Corn was planted in March and April, cotton in April and May. Soybeans have been planted from April to the present. Corn is the only crop that has survived the elements--frost, drought and floods--in good condition. Grain sorthum is doing pretty good, but many acres were replanted.

Rainfall during late June and early July has put crops in most of Scott County in critical condition. Areas of the county had over 20 inches of rain in June. This allowed only three days of field work. Several acres of wheat are yet to be harvested. Hopefully, wheat will be harvested in time to plant soybeans. The ground must dry up first.

The west and east areas of the county have been the hardest hit. Many soils in these areas are poorly drained and dry slowly. Early planted beans have turned yellow in many fields due to lack of oxygen and nitrogen deficiency. Some fields have grown up with weeds and the row is hard to find. It looks like there will be many acres of weedly crops this year.

The cotton crop was off to an early good satart, but it is now far behind for July. Two to three thousand acres have been destroyed and many more are questionable. A few pinhaead squares were being set in the largest cotton July 4th.. Farmers generally like to have blooms about July 4th.

It normally takes takes 20 to 25 days from square to white bloom. This means it will be about Aug. 1 for the earliest bloom. Your guess is as good as the next fellow's as to when osome of the smaller cotton will start squaring. The only hopes for cotton this late is for ideal weather the rest of July, August and September and a late frost.

Cotton should be given the utmost care the remainer of the season. This means no herbicides over the top. Direct all herbicides to the base of the plant. Use the recommended herbicide and rate. If equipment is not available for direct spraying, try to get choppers to hoe out the weeds Cultivate as soon as weather permits, but cultivate sallow to avoid root pruning.

. Nitrogen may be needed on some fields on some fields, but I suggest you leave it off this year since it is already late. Watch for insects. Boll worms and boll weevils are expected to be bad this year in certain areas. The late fruiting cotton will be especially vulnerable to these insects. Keep a lclose lookout for red spiders, and treat isolated areas soon as detected.

One of the big questions now is, "How late should I plant soybeans?" This is a good question and one but the Good Lord really knows. Items such as soil moisture, price, foulness, and soil type should be considered. Farmers should do their dead level best to complete planting by or before July 15. Highly productive sandy loam soils may go up to July 20 and still make 15 bushels.

A mid or late season bean should be planted. I would favor the mid-season bean this far north, because of the hazard of early frost. However, maturity date of the two beans will be within a few days of each other.

For example, Forrest and Pickett soybeans planted July 5 will flower abut Aug. 21 and Aug. 26 respectively. The Forrest will be mature about Oct. 29 and Pickett No. 4, or 5 days' difference. The average kfirst killing frost for this area is Oct. 21, so neither variety would reach maturity, but the Forrest would have the best chance.

Beans planted this late will flower early or about 124 to 36 inches. Our determinate-type soybeans grow very little after blooming starts. Therefore, beans should be planted in narrow rows or drilled. Seeding rate should be increased to one bushel per acre in the row and two bushels drilled.

However, it isn't all bad, and as some farmers have said, "it could always be worse." This is true. The corn crop has the best potential right now of any crop. We expect to hear of yields in excess of 150 bushels per acre on many farms. Another good rain will be needed in about 10 days or so.

The wheat crop was much better than expected. Several farmers had yields over 50 bushels per acre.

The remainder of the season will require the utmost in management for average or near average yields.

UMC Researchers Probe Peru Mystery

Mystery surrounding the decimation of the Chica Valley in Peru may be solved by a University of Missouri-Columbia archaeological team.

The valley, formerly productive, has become a desert and receives no rain although only three miles from an ocean,

The National Science Foundation has granted $60,000 to Dr. Robert A. Benfer, UMC associate professor, to lead a team into the valley to determine what happened and if the area can be restored through reforestation.

President's Tee-Off

William Howard Taft was the first president to play golf and was considered a good player. In August, 1909, the first year of his presidency, a man bet $1,000 that Taft could not play the difficult Myopia Golf Course in Boston within the required 100 strokes. Taft turned in his clubs at 98.

CIBA-GEIGY sues EPA over pesticide trade secrets

GREENSBORO, N.C.--Ciba-Geigy and the National Agricultural Chemicals Association (NACA) have filed suit in Federal Court against Environmental Protection Agency Administrator, Russel Train to prevent the EPA from releasing trade secret and confidential information that had been submitted in support of registration for three Ciba-Geigy pesticides.

Complaint for declaratory judgment, filed in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York, also seeks to prevent the release of similar data submitted by all member companies of the NACA.

The action was filed against the EPA after the agency notified Ciba-Geigy that it intended to release information on Princep (simazine) which is used primarily as a herbicide on corn, fruit and nut crops and as an algicide in water, Acaraben (chlorobenzilate), which is used primarily as a miticide on citrus, and Evik (ametryn), a herbicide used primarily on corn, sugarcane and pineapple.

The information the EPA intended to release consists of metabolism, toxicity, efficacy and environmental studies conducted by Ciba-Geigy over long periods of time at a cost of millions of dollars. The EPA intended to release the information to three companies which requested the data to support their petitions to register the products.

Amvac Chemical Corp. requested the data to support its petition for three formulations of simazine, Occidental Chemical Co. filed a request for data to support the registration of ametryn and Colorado International Corp. requested date to suport the registration of chlorobenzilate.

In the complaint, Ciba-Geigy demands judgment declaring that all test data on these products which were submitted to EPA or its predecessors (1) was developed through the substantial expenditure of Ciba-Geigy's time, effort or money; (b) that the test data has been and is maintained as confidential; and (c) that the data is trade secret and confidential commercial information and that the disclosure of the data by the EPA is prohibited by the Freedom of Information Act and by the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act and will deprive Ciba-Geigy of property without due process of law, in violation of the 5th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution.

Farm Bureau is concerned about college funds

JEFFERSON CITY--"We, the farmers of Missouri, are vitally interested in our College of Agriculture and the contribution it makes to the production of food and fiber, and feel that funds are needed now for modern research facilities. As the Missouri farmers no longer farm with horses, neither can our college continue to work with outdated facilities and equipment," says C.R. "Dick" Johnston, president of the 60,000-member Missouri Farm Bureau Federation.

Speaking at a news conference with College of Agriculture official Dean Elmer Kiehl, Missouri Senate Appropriations Committee members Norman L. Merrell and Richard M. Webster and Ralph Uthlaut, Senate Agriculture Committe, Johnston said, "More funds are needed now for modern research facilities. It's a real folly to think that professors can supply tested research information for agriculture with the small appropriations they must live with each year.

"I don't think the real financial needs of the College of Agriculture have ever been presented to the public, school officials or the Legislature in a manner they understand," he added.

First and foremost, he said, must start at the university and present in a convincing manner to University officials the real neesds of the College of Agriculture and Experiment Station." Through Farm Bureau and the efforts of other farm leaders, our university officials must be made to realize how important the College of Agriculture and Experiment Station are to Missouri agriculture.

Not only are facilities needed, but research equipment for modern technology is of the utmost importance. In today's world of rising fuel, fertilizer and farm equipment costs , research is the only answer to keeping American people well fed at the most economical cost of any country, Johnston commented

It wasn't long ago that funds were requested to construct a needed animal science building. These funds, Johnston said, could have been matched by grants of several thousnd dollars. However, through delays of one sort or another, one grant was lost altogether, and rising costs required changing plans on construction of other buildings.

"This isn't the way we conduct our private business and we're only hurting agriculture, the state's No. 1 industry. If we continue to limp along with yesterday's research methods and never provide the modern facilities needed for research, information and education at our university, then Missouri agriculture will suffer.

Fireblight disease zaps apples, pears

KANSAS CITY--Scientists know now how fireblight disease zaps apples and pears.

The bacteria-produced toxin plugs the xylem vessels which carry water throughout the plant. Result: the plant (apple or pear tree) wilts and often dies, says University of Missouri-Columbia plant pathologists.

In a report given Tuesday to the annual meeting of the American Phytopathological Society, Robert N. Goodman and J.A. White said bacteria cause neighboring cells to produce blocking material which filters into the large xylem vessels and blocks them.

"It's a little like hardening of the arteries in humans, only worse," said Goodman. "With hardening of the arteries, the arteris are constricted so blood flow is reduced. In the case of fireblight, the xylem vessels are jammed shut."

Goodman said plant pathologists will now try to find out how this blockage can be prevented and are also working with plant breeders to develop resistant varieties.

The Next Hundred Years

The Bicentennial celebrations have come and gone and Americans can rightly be proud and happy as they look back on the national birthday party. There was almost none of the violence and protest that have characterized our more recent years and very little of the disruptions that had been promised and threatened by the pathologically discontented. Prayer, we are happy to report, was a feature of many of the celebrations, as well as other acknowledgements of the hand of God in the origin and destiny of our nation.

This is greatly to the good, for in the years that will separate our bicentennial and tricentennial anniversaries America will almost certainly fact its greatest tests and perhaps its greatest trials.

Both in the longer run and the more foreseeable short run period which lies ahead, we will face massive challenges. As the leader of the free world, we will have to cope with the problem of huge population increases in underdeveloped countries which will swamp their resources and probably overwhelm their political institutions. We will face a world where nuclear materials will be in nearly everybody's hands and where there will be an increasing itchiness to use them for destruction. And we will confront the continuing, ever mounting challenge posed by Soviet military power harnessed to an ideology which vows that godless communism is the inevitable fulfillment of man's destiny.

And looming in the immediate future is the festering, still unsolved Mideast problem. If the "balloon goes up" once again in that tortured cockpit of world history, we can expect consequences to our security and economic well-being which can hardly be calculated but which will certainly be adverse.

So the America of today needs the guidance and protection of the Almighty as much, if not more, than ever before in its history. That should be the sober, underlying understanding of our Bicentennial celebrations. We are pleased that for many it was.

GOD'S LITTLE ACRE

WASHINGTON— Everyone knows Jimmy Carter did it. But no one knows how he did it. This is the truth, so help me God.

On Oct. 28, 1974, Jimmy Carter went out to his field in Plains, Ga., and got on his knees. His sister came out and said, "Jimmy-Earl, what on God's green earth are you doing?"

"I'm planting delegates," Jimmy replied, without looking up.

"Peanuts, Jimmy-Earl. You're supposed to be planting peanuts. Delegates will never grow in the South."

Jimmy just smiled.

Jimmy's sister went into the house and said, "Maw, you want know what Jimmy-Earl's doing out there? He's pulled up all the peanuts and he's planting delegates in their place. If he keeps it up we could lose the whole farm."

"Oh, let Jimmy be. He said if he could harvest enough delegates in the next year and a half he could win first prize at the fair."

"That's the stupidest think I ever heard of. Who's going to give first prize to a Georgia peanut farmer from Plains, Ga.?"

"Jimmy says if he gets the planting in early he'll have more delegates than anybody else, and they'll have to give it to him."

"Maw, that ain't delegate soil. The only thing it's good for is peanuts and earthworms. Delegates grow in New York and Michigan and Ohio and California. Even if Jimmy-Earl manages to grow 'em, they ain't going to be fit to eat."

"Hon, I only gave one acre to Jimmy-Earl to grow delegates on. He calls it 'God's little acre.' If he can raise 'em there, let him be."

Every day Jimmy went out and watered his acre. If he can raise 'em there, let him be."

Every day Jimmy went out and watered his acre. In six months the first little delegate popped out of the ground.

Jimmy brought it to the house, a smile on his face.

"Well, I got me my first delegate."

Jimmy's sister sneered, "Jimmy-Earl, one delegate doesn't give anyone a blue ribbon. You're going to need a ton o them."

Jimmy just smiled

A few months later there were delegates sprouting up, one right after the other.

"Danged it all, Maw," Jimmy's brother complained. "Jimmy-Earl keeps growing delegates, and there's no place to raise my earthworms. You gave him one acre and he keeps taking up all my wormland."

"Jimmy-Earl's got his heart on bringing in a crop of delegates," Jimmy's mother said. "Let him be."

"But, Maw, what about the Jackson blight and Udall plague and the Bayh tornados and Humphrey hot winds? Anything could happen in the next year. At least with earthworms we know we got us a paying crop."

"Don't worry about Jimmy-Earl. He's cross-pollinated his delegates so they can stand a New England winter, a Midwest frost and the Southern Wallace weevil."

Jimmy came into the house with a bunch of delegates in his arms and said, "I got some more delegates, Maw."

"We ain't got no more room in the house for 'em, Jimmy-Earl. You're going to have to put them in the barn."

"There's peanuts in the barn," Jimmy's brother protested.

Jimmy just smiled.

In May of 1976, the Carter farm had mor delegates in the bag than anyone could dream of.

The big brokers from New York and Chicago and Detroit and Miami and everywhere else in the country all had to come to Plains, Ga., and deal with Jimmy.

They were in awe because no one ever velieved anything but peanuts could grow in Georgia.

One of the brokers said, "My God, Mr. Carter, you have enough delegates here to be the President of the United States."

Jimmy just smiled.

Hearts Are Trumps

On New Year's Eve, 1966, my mother and I were part of the festive crowd on the streets of San Francisco's Chinatown. Suddenly three young men began fighting nearby. In no time the fistfight was a riot. Tourists ran from the melee. Down the block four mounted policemen tried to make their way through the crowd.

Mom never saw what hit her. But someone knocked her to the pavement, severly twisting her ankle. I tried to raise her, but I was only 12, and it seemed as if the milling crowd would trample us both. Just then an Oriental boy, about my age, noticed our predicament. Pushing toward us, he got under one of Mom's arms and motioned me to do the same. Together we helped her to a doorway away from the fight. Then the boy disappeared, but returned with a policeman, who sent him to call an ambulance. I never saw the boy again, and the policeman did not know his name, but he will always be in my prayers.--A Beaupre.

In this senatorial district of Missouri in the last few years, at least one candidate for reelection lost enough votes to go down the defeat by a narrow margin, largely becaused he endorsed and managed a campaign for a U.S. Senator.--Paris Appeal

Business school is back in business

Business, believe it or not, is now the most popular subject among both men and owmen college undergraduates, and nothing else is even close. A nationwide survey of current freshmen students by the American Council on Education found that nearly 19 per cent of them have chosen business as their probable major.

"Demand is going up across the country faster than tuition,-says Dr. William Flewellen, dean of the University of Gerorgia's College of Business Administration and newly elected president of the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB).

While the number of men starting college who are interested in business has been steadily rising-from 17.3 per cent in 1966 to 30.1 in 1975-more and more women and minority students are also seeking a business education. In predominantly black colleges, 22.5 per cent of the freshmen students report that they want to study business.

The AACSB cites a number of reasons for these developments:

First, quite simply, is the economy. Most of the jobs available in today's labor market are in business, especially accounting.

Second, there are more opportunities in business for women and minorities today than there were five or 10 years ago.

A third reason is the declining demand in the professions. The number of teaching jobs available has decreased enormously over the last 10 years. Last spring, law schools graduated twice as many lawyers as there were new law jobs.

A fourth, and perhaps most interesting reason, is a changed attitude toward business and its future role. There is a noticeable decline in antibusiness sentiment on campuses.

"The antibusiness attutide has been superseded by a growing consensus that societal problems of greatest concern will not be solved unless private initiative and power are brought to bear on them," says Dr. Earl Cheit, dean of the School of Business Administration at the University of California in Berkeley.

This is reflected in the fact that the number of men and women who want to study business is rising even faster than the number who plan to make careers in the business world. The reason for this is given by the students themeselves, who now see see business training as the route to many fields in the nonprofit or public sector as well as the private sector. They are realizing that business management skills are as essential in running a welfare management skills are as essential in running a welfare program or a hospital or an art museum as in running a company.

In a related development, reports Higher Education News Service, more than 50 of the nation's business schools have changed their names to schools of management during the past decde.

REGULATING THE REGULATORS

Regulation—overregulation, that is—has been blamed for everything from inflation to ennervation, from high costs of shipping or airline travel to low levels of industrial productivity or television entertainment.

Earle B. Barnes, executive vice president of Dow Chemical Co., charges that "the business community has long been guilty of losing its freedom by the cowardly act of compromise when they knew a (regulatory) bill was totally onerous from the beginning." He calls for businessmen to be more aggressive in defending themselves against unrealistic or unnecessary federal regulation.

But when does federal regulation become unrealistic or unnecessary? Equally as strong sentiments have been voiced on the other side.

For example, a plan to reduce the Interstate Commerce Commission's control over the nation's transportation would "plunge the trucking industry into chaotic rate wars and drastically reduce the number of firms in the business," warns Lee R. Sollenbarger, chairman of the American Trucking Association.

"Airline deregulation will lead to chaos and higher costs rather than improving the existing system," says Charles C. Tillinghast Jr., chairman and president of TWA.

These two industries, however, seem to be exceptions to the current antiregulatory mood shared by most businessmen as well as the general public. According to Sen. Charles Percy, regulatory reform is one of the critical issues confronting the 94th Congress, and although not as glamorous as some other issues, in many respects it is far more important and its consequences for the nation are likely to be greater.

Excessive regulation, says the Illinois Republican, has an annual cost in excess of $60 billion. The government's multitudinous agencies—SEC, FTC, CAB, EPA, etc.—constitute "a complex alphabet soup" whose effect is tepid at best and at worst fuels inflation, stifles competition and produces mountains of paperwork and red tape.

Percy, together with Assistant Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W. Va., has introduced the Regulatory Reform Act of 1976. Briefly, the bill would require the President to submit to Congress by March 31 of each year, from 1977 through 1981, comprehensive plans for reforming regulation in specific areas of the economy. No later than September 15 of each year, the appropriate congressional committees would be mandated either to report out the President's original proposals or their own comprehensive reform bills.

Without this kind of disciplinary approach, says Percy, "tenacious special interests among the regulators and regulated alike, and in the Congress, will effectively stymie efforts at truly comprehensive reform."

COOPERATIVE ACTION

Two major segments of the U.S. medical system--hospitals and physicians--through their national organizations, the the American Hospital Association (AHA) and the American Medical Association (AMA), have committed their efforts to help guide the nation's medical destiny. They are involved in such vital areas as improving the quality and availability of care, controlling the costs of medical services and matters relating to medical education.

A comprehensive "Report on Physician-Hospital Relations 1974," approved by the AMA's governing body and reviewed by the AHA, outlines many areas of mutual concern. It is recommended that doctors in their training should be made more aware of their responsibility to help guide hospital management and become familiar with hospital rates and charges. The AMA report recommends that, "...hospitals be urged to make available routinely to the medical staff copies of lists of rates and charges for rooms and for common tests and procedures." It is urged that hospital personnel consult with medical staffs and physicians "...on a regular basis about rates and charges and mutually cooperate in efforts to find ways to lower costs in any feasible way." Finally, it is recommended that physicians, while not allowing cost considerations to in any way lessen the quality of care, should still keep costs in mind. They should order "...only measures necessary for the diagnosis and treatment of their patients...."

The cooperative concern now being exhibited on the part of physician and hospital leadership auguers well for the future of the U.S. medical system. The highest-cost care need not always be the best. At the same time, concern for cost should never be allowed to undermine quality. Striking a balance between primary concern for quality and recognition that cost must be controlled is top priority business for U.S. medical professionals.

Miracle Politics?

Carter's Coalition: Camelot, McGovern, Lindsay, ADA, Liberals, Militant Labor Chiefs and Wallace Conservatives

NEW YORK — One convention evening, Pierre Salinger, who was the late John Kennedy's Ron Nessen, lined up for a hot dog at a counter sky-high back of the honored guest section above the Madison Square Garden delegate floor. As he munched, he looked down and observed the most amazing political coalition ever skillfully carpentered together -- ranging from Kennedy's Camelot to George Wallace's segregationist warriors.

On the floor were scores of powerful Carter delegates who hated each other and their respective principals and principles.

Glancing around the floor laden with languid delegates another veteran opinion analyst wondered how long Jimmy Carter could hold solid his feuding phalanxes led by such political personalities as Bobby Kennedy's and George McGovern's Frank Mankiewicz (an official Carter floor leader) and Brooklyn's longshoreman delegate Anthony Scotto, whose labor coalition destroyed the Carter New York machine in the primaries.

This is the lingering key question of the nominating convention.

Among the 21 delegates Carter personally chose to be floor leaders was Rev. Joe Duffy of the United Church of Christ, former national chairman of Americans for Democratic Action. He was Carter's representative on the platform committee.

Another floor leader as his close collaborator, the powerful organizational genius, Mrs. Anne Wexler Duffy, who virtually ran McGovern's 1972 conbention machinery, and who disdains what she calls "labor bosses." She is passionately hated by George Meany's national political director, Al Barkan. (He lunched with hundreds of labor leaders here Wednesday who pledged support to Carter, but not too fervently.)

Anne Wexler was the Carter person on the rules committee. There were other such liberals as Anne Wexler, who is associate publisher of Rolling Stone. There was, for example, the militant black Detroit mayor and floor leader Coleman Young.

Another Carter floor leader is lawyer-writer Ted Sorenson, who has been with Carter for almost a year -- and who has been, with one foray into New York state politics, virtually politically inactive since the days of lightning and thunder as White House historian for Jack Kennedy.

There were others on the well-balanced, political, ethnic and demographic list of 21 floor leaders all suggested by Carter' still "unknown" eminence gris Charles Kirbo. Side by side the liberals right and left of Camelot, ex-New York Mayor John Lindsay's revivalists of the camp of the light that failed and conservative Southerners havebeen working for Carter in what must be the weirdest political coalition since Franklin Roosevelt's early days.

There is, for example, Lindsay's former Big Apple human resources administrator Jule Sugarman, who developed one of the most massive welfare systems (New York City's) of income maintenance since the invention of public alms. Sugarman, who found New York overwhelming, left to become chief administrative officer of Atlanta, Ga. Now he's lending his considerable talents to Kirbo's legal colleague, Jack Watson, coordinator of personnel and program planning for the transition between Jerry Ford and Jimmy Carter.

Alongside them in one echelon or another are such labor leaders as the United Mine Workers of America's reformist president Arnold Miller, the traditional Democratic party left-of-center's auto union chief Leonard Woodcock and the militant municipal employes leader Jerry Wurf, all part of the liberal Labor Coalition Clearing House.

It isn't unusual for left and right-wing forces to ally themselves behind a major party candidate. But this is an alliance of feuding leaders who can no more swallow each other's ideologies than they could a packet of unwrapped razor blades. They simply have diametrically opposed economic as well as philosophical interests.

On one hand, for example, is a labor force now planning to launch a vast unionizing campaign in the South. On the other side are conservative Southern counsels for banks, textile firms and multi-national corporations gearing to stand firm against boycotts and legions of union-card-bearing business agents.

There are, for example, the teachers' federation leader Al Shanker, who has some 40 delegates, an the Terry Herndon-John Ryor National Education Association, claiming several hundred delegates, which are for school busing. Many of Carter's Southern supporters are angrily opposed to forced busing as are some of Carter's Boston backers.

Thus, at the big pier-side Sunday night fried chicken bash, Mrs. Ted Sorenson, of Camelot, worked side-by-side with Southern ladies of the planning committee to make certain the celebrants didn't run out of beer and potato salsd.

Thus, now, the national vital question isn't merely "will the real Jimmy Carter step forward?" Question is can he work this miracle coalition for the duration of the campaign.

One White House insider, who undoubtedly has voiced similar views to President Ford, mused the other day:

"How can he keep this impossible thing rolling -- this coalition of McGovernites, Kennedyites, Southern and Northern blacks, politicians, North and South, liberals and conservatives, unionists and anti-unionists? Could be Carter's a miracle worker. We don't believe he is."

Soon we'll see.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Caution: U.S. Government May Be Health Hazard

By Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — The United States government may be hazardous to your health. At least two government agencies, according to confidential studies, may permit dangerous chemicals to poison our food, water and air.

The Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA), for example, is so anxious to develop new energy sources that it is recklessly ignoring disease-causing byproducts. The new technologies could create pollutants that cause cancer, nerve ailments, liver diseases, tooth corrosion and fatal poisonings.

At the same time, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has overlooked evidence that a cancer-causing group of chemicals is already threatening public health. These chemicals, known as nitrosamines, are considered so dangerous that the federal government regulates their presence in food. Yet EPA has done little to keep them from polluting the air.

ERDA was established 18 months ago to consolidate the government's energy research programs. But any new energy sources that are developed, according to the agency's congressional mandate, must be harmless to the public health.

A White House study charges, however, that ERDA is pursuing its energy research without regard for the health threat. This 180-page report, prepared by the President's Council on Environmental Quality, has been available only to top government officials.

The report charges bluntly that some of the proposed energy projects "cannot be operated in an environmentally acceptable manner." As an example, the report cites "synthetic gas plants (which) may use nickel as a catalyst." This could create cancer-causing nickel compounds.

The coal conversion process produces 18 substances, in addition to nickel, which can cause leukemia, brain damage, pneumonia and a host of other disorders. If all this sounds like scare propaganda, it is research produced not by environmental fanatics but by White House experts.

One problem, the White House study points out, is that ERDA's technologists and environmental researchers "do not have a close working relationship." Some technological developments have yet to be examined for their effects on the environment.

One energy-producing process that may soon by put into use, for example, emits a proved cancer-causer called nickel subsulphide. But ERDA has made absolutely no study of its impact on health.

ERDA "must not irrevocably commit the nation" to a new energy form, the report urges in summation, until man's survival is weighed into the equation.

EPA officials, meanwhile, have repeatedly pushed aside evidence that the public is breathing cancer-causing nitrosamines. These chemicals are formed when substances known as amines, which are present in the air and the body, react with the nitrogen oxides that spew from auto exhaust pipes and industrial smoke stacks.

Incredibly, the EPA itself has acknowledged the harmful effects of nitrosamines. "As a family of carcinogens (cancer causers)," states one EPA study, "the nitrosamines have no equals." Another confidential report candidly confesses that some "nitrosamines are likely to be carcinogenic in humans."

Yet the EPA has put the nitrosamine menace on the back burner. It has turned down repeated suggestions that the air above certain cities be monitored for nitrosamines. One request came from scientist David Fine, who has developed a widely acclaimed technique for identifying the deadly chemicals in the air.

In independent tests, he found nitrosamines in the atmosphere above Baltimore and Belle, W.Va. At the latter site, the highest levels were recorded in the vicinity of a DuPont plant which manufactures amines. Between 1956 and 1974, 144 employes of the plant came down with cancer.

The EPA hired another contractor to verify Fine's data. Although the findings were quickly confirmed, the agency refused to begin a monitoring program on the excuse that it had run out of funds.

Not until last March, after pressure was brought upon EPA by Rep. Andrew Maguire, D.-N.J., did the regulatory agency finally begin limited monitoring programs in Boston and New York City. EPA has also agreed to conduct some tests in heavily industrialized parts of New Jersey, an area known to the local populace as "cancer alley."

Six months ago, the EPA also established a study group of outside scientists to assess the nitrosamine problem. But at least three members of the task force, we have learned, have ties to the industries they have been asked to investigate.

There is little promise, moreover, that the EPA will learn more about the problem within the near future. Out of a $175 million research budget for the current fiscal year, only $300,000 has been earmarked for the study of nitrosamines.

Footnote: A spokesman for the Council on Environmental Quality told us that our copy of the Whie House study was a "draft" and would undergo "some changes." An EPA spokesman insisted his agency was studying nitrosamines "as fast as possible with all the resources available."

The Next Hundred Years

The Bicentennial celebrations have come and gone and Americans can rightly be proud and happy as they look back on the national birthday party. There was almost none of the violence and protest that have characterized our more recent years and very little of the disruptions that had been promised and threatened by the pathologically discontented. Prayer, we are happy to report, was a feature of many of the celebrations, as well as other acknowledgements of the hand of God in the origin and destiny of our nation.

This is greatly to the good, for in the years that will separate our bicentennial and tricentennial anniversaries America will almost certainly fact its greatest tests and perhaps its greatest trials.

Both in the longer run and the more foreseeable short run period which lies ahead, we will face massive challenges. As the leader of the free world, we will have to cope with the problem of huge population increases in underdeveloped countries which will swamp their resources and probably overwhelm their political institutions. We will face a world where nuclear materials will be in nearly everybody's hands and where there will be an increasing itchiness to use them for destruction. Last week, leading contender for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate endorsed another man who is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President.

It was a mistake, just as it always is for one candidate to endorse another in any primary campaign, no matter on which ticket they are running.

A candidate has all he or she can do to secure support for nomination without taking the chances of creating enemies by endorsing some other candidate. The candidate who does endorse another in the primary has everthing to lose, little if anything to gain.

In this senatorial district of Missouri in the last few years, at least one candidate for reelection lost enough votes to go down the defeat by a narrow margin, largely becaused he endorsed and managed a campaign for a U.S. Senator.—Paris Appeal

Business school is back in business

Business, believe it or not, is now the most popular subject among both men and owmen college undergraduates, and nothing else is even close. A nationwide survey of current freshmen students by the American Council on Education found that nearly 19 per cent of them have chosen business as their probable major.

"Demand is going up across the country faster than tuition,—says Dr. William Flewellen, dean of the University of Gerorgia's College of Business Administration and newly elected president of the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB).

While the number of men starting college who are interested in business has been steadily rising-from 17.3 per cent in 1966 to 30.1 in 1975-more and more women and minority students are also seeking a business education. In predominantly black colleges, 22.5 per cent of the freshmen students report that they want to study business.

The AACSB cites a number of reasons for these developments:

First, quite simply, is the economy. Most of the jobs available in today's labor market are in business, expecially accounting.

Second, there are more opportunities in business for women and minorities today than there were five or 10 years ago.

A third reason is the declining demand in the professions. The number of teaching jobs available has decreased enormously over the last 10 years. Last spring, law schools graduated twice as many lawyers as there were new law jobs.

A fourth, and perhaps most interesting reason, is a changed attitude toward business and its future role. There is a noticeable decline in antibusiness sentiment on campuses.

"The antibusiness attutide has been superseded by a growing consensus that societal problems of greatest concern will not be solved unless private initiative and power are brought to bear on them," says Dr. Earl Cheit, dean of the School of Business Administration at the University of California in Berkeley.

This is reflected in the fact that the number of men and women who want to study business is rising even faster than the number who plan to make careers in the business world. The reason for this is given by the students themeselves, who now see see business training as the route to many fields in the nonprofit or public sector as well as the private sector. They are realizing that business management skills are as essential in running a welfare management skills are as essential in running a welfare program or a hospital or an art museum as in running a company.

In a related development, reports Higher Education News Service, more than 50 of the nation's business schools have changed their names to schools of management during the past decde.

REGULATING THE REGULATORS

Regulation—overregulation, that is—has been blamed for everything from inflation to ennervation, from high costs of shipping or airline travel to low levels of industrial productivity or television entertainment.

Earle B. Barnes, executive vice president of Dow Chemical Co., charges that "the business community has long been guilty of losing its freedom by the cowardly act of compromise when they knew a (regulatory) bill was totally onerous from the beginning." He calls for businessmen to be more aggressive in defending themselves against unrealistic or unnecessary federal regulation.

But when does federal regulation become unrealistic or unnecessary? Equally as strong sentiments have been voiced on the other side.

For example, a plan to reduce the Interstate Commerce Commission's control over the nation's transportation would "plunge the trucking industry into chaotic rate wars and drastically reduce the number of firms in the business," warns Lee R. Sollenbarger, chairman of the American Trucking Association.

"Airline deregulation will lead to chaos and higher costs rather than improving the existing system," says Charles C. Tillinghast Jr., chairman and president of TWA.

These two industries, however, seem to be exceptions to the current antiregulatory mood shared by most businessmen as well as the general public. According to Sen. Charles Percy, regulatory reform is one of the critical issues confronting the 94th Congress, and although not as glamorous as some other issues, in many respects it is far more important and its consequences for the nation are likely to be greater.

Excessive regulation, says the Illinois Republican, has an annual cost in excess of $60 billion. The government's multitudinous agencies—SEC, FTC, CAB, EPA, etc.—constitute "a complex alphabet soup" whose effect is tepid at best and at worst fuels inflation, stifles competition and produces mountains of paperwork and red tape.

Percy, together with Assistant Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W. Va., has introduced the Regulatory Reform Act of 1976. Briefly, the bill would require the President to submit to Congress by March 31 of each year, from 1977 through 1981, comprehensive plans for reforming regulation in specific areas of the economy. No later than September 15 of each year, the appropriate congressional committees would be mandated either to report out the President's original proposals or their own comprehensive reform bills.

Without this kind of disciplinary approach, says Percy, "tenacious special interests among the regulators and regulated alike, and in the Congress, will effectively stymie efforts at truly comprehensive reform."

COOPERATIVE ACTION

Two major segments of the U.S. medical system--hospitals and physicians--through their national organizations, the the American Hospital Association (AHA) and the American Medical Association (AMA), have committed their efforts to help guide the nation's medical destiny. They are involved in such vital areas as improving the quality and availability of care, controlling the costs of medical services and matters relating to medical education.

A comprehensive "Report on Physician-Hospital Relations 1974," approved by the AMA's governing body and reviewed by the AHA, outlines many areas of mutual concern. It is recommended that doctors in their training should be made more aware of their responsibility to help guide hospital management and become familiar with hospital rates and charges. The AMA report recommends that, "...hospitals be urged to make available routinely to the medical staff copies of lists of rates and charges for rooms and for common tests and procedures." It is urged that hospital personnel consult with medical staffs and physicians "...on a regular basis about rates and charges and mutually cooperate in efforts to find ways to lower costs in any feasible way." Finally, it is recommended that physicians, while not allowing cost considerations to in any way lessen the quality of care, should still keep costs in mind. They should order "...only measures necessary for the diagnosis and treatment of their patients...."

The cooperative concern now being exhibited on the part of physician and hospital leadership auguers well for the future of the U.S. medical system. The highest-cost care need not always be the best. At the same time, concern for cost should never be allowed to undermine quality. Striking a balance between primary concern for quality and recognition that cost must be controlled is top priority business for U.S. medical professionals.

Inside Labor

Miracle Politics?

Carter's Coalition: Camelot, McGovern, Lindsay, ADA, Liberals, Militant Labor Chiefs and Wallace Conservatives

NEW YORK — One convention evening, Pierre Salinger, who was the late John Kennedy's Ron Nessen, lined up for a hot dog at a counter sky-high back of the honored guest section above the Madison Square Garden delegate floor. As he munched, he looked down and observed the most amazing political coalition ever skillfully carpentered together -- ranging from Kennedy's Camelot to George Wallace's segregationist warriors.

On the floor were scores of powerful Carter delegates who hated each other and their respective principals and principles.

Glancing around the floor laden with languid delegates another veteran opinion analyst wondered how long Jimmy Carter could hold solid his feuding phalanxes led by such political personalities as Bobby Kennedy's and George McGovern's Frank Mankiewicz (an official Carter floor leader) and Brooklyn's longshoreman delegate Anthony Scotto, whose labor coalition destroyed the Carter New York machine in the primaries.

This is the lingering key question of the nominating convention.

Among the 21 delegates Carter personally chose to be floor leaders was Rev. Joe Duffy of the United Church of Christ, former national chairman of Americans for Democratic Action. He was Carter's representative on the platform committee.

Another floor leader as his close collaborator, the powerful organizational genius, Mrs. Anne Wexler Duffy, who virtually ran McGovern's 1972 conbention machinery, and who disdains what she calls "labor bosses." She is passionately hated by George Meany's national political director, Al Barkan. (He lunched with hundreds of labor leaders here Wednesday who pledged support to Carter, but not too fervently.)

Anne Wexler was the Carter person on the rules committee. There were other such liberals as Anne Wexler, who is associate publisher of Rolling Stone. There was, for example, the militant black Detroit mayor and floor leader Coleman Young.

Another Carter floor leader is lawyer-writer Ted Sorenson, who has been with Carter for almost a year -- and who has been, with one foray into New York state politics, virtually politically inactive since the days of lightning and thunder as White House historian for Jack Kennedy.

There were others on the well-balanced, political, ethnic and demographic list of 21 floor leaders all suggested by Carter' still "unknown" eminence gris Charles Kirbo. Side by side the liberals right and left of Camelot, ex-New York Mayor John Lindsay's revivalists of the camp of the light that failed and conservative Southerners havebeen working for Carter in what must be the weirdest political coalition since Franklin Roosevelt's early days.

There is, for example, Lindsay's former Big Apple human resources administrator Jule Sugarman, who developed one of the most massive welfare systems (New York City's) of income maintenance since the invention of public alms. Sugarman, who found New York overwhelming, left to become chief administrative officer of Atlanta, Ga. Now he's lending his considerable talents to Kirbo's legal colleague, Jack Watson, coordinator of personnel and program planning for the transition between Jerry Ford and Jimmy Carter.

Alongside them in one echelon or another are such labor leaders as the United Mine Workers of America's reformist president Arnold Miller, the traditional Democratic party left-of-center's auto union chief Leonard Woodcock and the militant municipal employes leader Jerry Wurf, all part of the liberal Labor Coalition Clearing House.

It isn't unusual for left and right-wing forces to ally themselves behind a major party candidate. But this is an alliance of feuding leaders who can no more swallow each other's ideologies than they could a packet of unwrapped razor blades. They simply have diametrically opposed economic as well as philosophical interests.

On one hand, for example, is a labor force now planning to launch a vast unionizing campaign in the South. On the other side are conservative Southern counsels for banks, textile firms and multi-national corporations gearing to stand firm against boycotts and legions of union-card-bearing business agents.

There are, for example, the teachers' federation leader Al Shanker, who has some 40 delegates, an the Terry Herndon-John Ryor National Education Association, claiming several hundred delegates, which are for school busing. Many of Carter's Southern supporters are angrily opposed to forced busing as are some of Carter's Boston backers.

Thus, at the big pier-side Sunday night fried chicken bash, Mrs. Ted Sorenson, of Camelot, worked side-by-side with Southern ladies of the planning committee to make certain the celebrants didn't run out of beer and potato salsd.

Thus, now, the national vital question isn't merely "will the real Jimmy Carter step forward?" Question is can he work this miracle coalition for the duration of the campaign.

One White House insider, who undoubtedly has voiced similar views to President Ford, mused the other day:

"How can he keep this impossible thing rolling -- this coalition of McGovernites, Kennedyites, Southern and Northern blacks, politicians, North and South, liberals and conservatives, unionists and anti-unionists? Could be Carter's a miracle worker. We don't believe he is."

Soon we'll see.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Caution: U.S. Government May Be Health Hazard

By Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — The United States government may be hazardous to your health. At least two government agencies, according to confidential studies, may permit dangerous chemicals to poison our food, water and air.

The Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA), for example, is so anxious to develop new energy sources that it is recklessly ignoring disease-causing byproducts. The new technologies could create pollutants that cause cancer, nerve ailments, liver diseases, tooth corrosion and fatal poisonings.

At the same time, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has overlooked evidence that a cancer-causing group of chemicals is already threatening public health. These chemicals, known as nitrosamines, are considered so dangerous that the federal government regulates their presence in food. Yet EPA has done little to keep them from polluting the air.

ERDA was established 18 months ago to consolidate the government's energy research programs. But any new energy sources that are developed, according to the agency's congressional mandate, must be harmless to the public health.

A White House study charges, however, that ERDA is pursuing its energy research without regard for the health threat. This 180-page report, prepared by the President's Council on Environmental Quality, has been available only to top government officials.

The report charges bluntly that some of the proposed energy projects "cannot be operated in an environmentally acceptable manner." As an example, the report cites "synthetic gas plants (which) may use nickel as a catalyst." This could create cancer-causing nickel compounds.

The coal conversion process produces 18 substances, in addition to nickel, which can cause leukemia, brain damage, pneumonia and a host of other disorders. If all this sounds like scare propaganda, it is research produced not by environmental fanatics but by White House experts.

One problem, the White House study points out, is that ERDA's technologists and environmental researchers "do not have a close working relationship." Some technological developments have yet to be examined for their effects on the environment.

One energy-producing process that may soon by put into use, for example, emits a proved cancer-causer called nickel subsulphide. But ERDA has made absolutely no study of its impact on health.

ERDA "must not irrevocably commit the nation" to a new energy form, the report urges in summation, until man's survival is weighed into the equation.

EPA officials, meanwhile, have repeatedly pushed aside evidence that the public is breathing cancer-causing nitrosamines. These chemicals are formed when substances known as amines, which are present in the air and the body, react with the nitrogen oxides that spew from auto exhaust pipes and industrial smoke stacks.

Incredibly, the EPA itself has acknowledged the harmful effects of nitrosamines. "As a family of carcinogens (cancer causers)," states one EPA study, "the nitrosamines have no equals." Another confidential report candidly confesses that some "nitrosamines are likely to be carcinogenic in humans."

Yet the EPA has put the nitrosamine menace on the back burner. It has turned down repeated suggestions that the air above certain cities be monitored for nitrosamines. One request came from scientist David Fine, who has developed a widely acclaimed technique for identifying the deadly chemicals in the air.

In independent tests, he found nitrosamines in the atmosphere above Baltimore and Belle, W.Va. At the latter site, the highest levels were recorded in the vicinity of a DuPont plant which manufactures amines. Between 1956 and 1974, 144 employes of the plant came down with cancer.

The EPA hired another contractor to verify Fine's data. Although the findings were quickly confirmed, the agency refused to begin a monitoring program on the excuse that it had run out of funds.

Not until last March, after pressure was brought upon EPA by Rep. Andrew Maguire, D-N.J., did the regulatory agency finally begin limited monitoring programs in Boston and New York City. EPA has also agreed to conduct some tests in heavily industrialized parts of New Jersey, an area known to the local populace as "cancer alley."

Six months ago, the EPA also established a study group of outside scientists to assess the nitrosamine problem. But at least three members of the task force, we have learned, have ties to the industries they have been asked to investigate.

There is little promise, moreover, that the EPA will learn more about the problem within the near future. Out of a $175 million research budget for the current fiscal year, only $300,000 has been earmarked for the study of nitrosamines.

Footnote: A spokesman for the Council on Environmental Quality told us that our copy of the Whie House study was a "draft" and would undergo "some changes." An EPA spokesman insisted his agency was studying nitrosamines "as fast as possible with all the resources available."

Plant, soil analysis aids farmers

By THOMAS BROWN
Area Agronomy Specialist

BLOOMFIELD--The Plant Tissue and Soil Analysis Program is being made available to farmers by the Extension Service again this year. Many problems including soil fertility problems are showing up in crops now, and farmers could help solve such soil problems by taking advantage of this program.

Plant tissue analysis involves the testing of leaves of growing crops to determine just how well fed the plants are. The leaf samples should be taken before or during the early reproductive stage of the crop and before seed development.

A soil test should be taken from the same area represented by the leaf sample at the same time for purposes of comparison. Both leaf and soil samples should be taken to a county University of Missouri Extension Center for testing.

Research has shown that the concentration of nutrients in the growing crop varies according to the available nu trients in the soil. Through research work, concentrations of nutrients needed for good crop yilds have been determined and desired levels established.

When plant analysis shows that some nutrient is below the desired level, it usually indicates a soil fertility problem. In some cases, however, the problem is not this simple. Nutrient levels in the plant may be low even though the levels of the various plant food elements in the soil are adequate.

In such cases, something other than fertility ais the problem. In such situations, a careful field examination usually shows that insects, diseases or nematodes have damaged the root system and limited the plants' ability to utilize available fertility.

In other cases, some unusual physical condition of the soil is found to be the problem. Locating such problems so that control measures acan be taken is very important to the farmer.

The season of the year is approaching when plant tissue and soil tisamples should be taken for analysis from most crops grown in this area.

Samples should be taken from corn fields between emergence and pollination. The best time for taking soybean samples is when the first bloom appears. Samples from cotton fields should be taken before tbolls start to set on the plants. Sorghum samples should be taken when the head is fully emerged but before pollination.

Additional information pertaining to this program may be obtained at University of Missouri Extension Centers. A publication titled Sampling Plant Tissue and Soil for Analysis, which is available upon request at extension centers gives detailed information as to when and how to take samples for each crop grown in this area.

'Model' aids in finding diseases

KANSAS CITY, Mo.--A "model" that will help scientists develop plant varieties more resistant to the most complex diseases--inclusing charcoal rot of soybeans--was revealed here Friday.

University of Missouri-Columbia plant pathologists reported that they have develoed techniques to determine the level of a plant's resistance to "non'specific" pathogens. These pathogens are general disease-causing organisms that are not controlled by individual plant genes.

Thomas D. Wyllie, A.M . Moustafa and G. E. Short told the American Phylopathological Society that their methods for finding resistance to these non-specific pathogens were better than the standard techniques now being used.

Current methods just measure how fast the organism grows and attacks dead tissues. The UMC methods whow the plant's resistance (or lack of it) by measuring the finer points of the organism's growth in both live and dead tissues of the plant.

The UMC researchers specifically studied the charcoal rot pathogen, a fungus that produces a serious disease of soybeans. Typical of non-specific pathogens, this fungus is parasitic (attacks live tissue) and saprophitic (attacks deead tissue). And it is increasing its numbers in soils, thus becoming an even greater nemesis the next spring.

The UMC researchers believe that their model for indentifying plants resistant of charcoal rot and other diseases caused by non-specific pathogens will help plant breeders develop varieties more resistant to these type diseases.

Manager Dave Bristol of the Atlanta Braves began his baseball career with Welch in the Appalachian League in 1951 as a second baseman.

Wet weather takes toll

By JOE SCOTT
State Agronomy Specialist

PORTAGEVILLE-More cotton acreage disappears every week, as heavy rains and weeds take their toll. It appears now that the cotton crop may drop under the 200,000-acre mark in Missouri.

Some of the later coton will need a lot of sunshine the next couple of months to produce a crop worth harvesting.

Weeds are a problem in quite a few fields and growers are having to disconti nue the use of DSMA and MSMA as cotton begins to bloom.

Cotton is reaching the stage where lay-by applications can be made. Karmex, Dynex, Cotoran, Lanex, Caparol or Lorox can be used as lay-by treatments. Add a surfactant if weeds are present.

Remember not to exceed an accumulated total of 3.2 pounds per year of diuron, fluometuron and linuron. So if you have beer using diuron (Karmex, etc.) or fluometuron (Cotoran, Lanex) as per-emergents and as postemergents be sure to add up total amount of actual material applied

More probe is being used this year and has given good control of hard to kill weeds-like teaweed, cocklebur, velvetleaf (wild cotton) and spurred anoda when applied postemergence.

Now that cotton is squaring and blooming, fields need to be scouted often for plant bugs, boll weevils and boll worms. Also, spider mites may be showing up in some fields.

Wet conditions are also affecting soybeans and some are being lost in fields that have been flooded. Pemiscot County farmers recently lost 20 per cent or more of their soybeans after heavy rains.

Weeds are a problem in soybeans. Questions concerning blooming dates of soybeans, as when to apply 2,4-DB (Butyrac, Butoxone) as a salve operation, are being asked.

Mid-season varieties , like York, Dare, Forrest and Mack, planted the first week in May wshould have been blooming July 10-15 , middle of May plantings will be blooming Juy 15-20. May 25-30 plantings should be blooming the last week in July and first week in August. Blooming has been a little later than normal due to the unusual season.

Full season varieties, such as Pickett, Lee and Davis, planted the first of May should be blooming by July 25. May 15 plantings will be blooming around Aug. 1 at the Delta Center, according to data compiled by Dr. Grover Shannon, soybean breeder at the center.

Cotton grows in tent use

NEW YORK--Tents are mostly cotton--and they're geting more and more that way.

According to industry sources, cotton's share of the tent market this year has risen to 70 per cent--up from the 60 per cent share of one year ago.

"Cotton use in tent fabrics is running two-to-one over its nearest competitor, nylon," says Richard Abes, director of home fabrics and industrial marketing for Cotton Inc., the fiber marketing and research company of U.S. cotton producers.

Major reason for cotton's dominance of the tent market, says Abes, is reflected in a recent statement from American Waterproofing Corp.

"Cotton tents are better," says a spokesman for the firm. "They give the camper what he looks for in a tent."

A spokesman for National Canvas Products, a tent manufacturer and finisher, adds, "The experienced camper prefers cotton. Many who purchased all-nylon camping tents in the past are not satisfied."

Abes explains that cotton tent fabrics "breathe." The air permeability of the fabric allows moisture vapor to pass outside the tent, thereby preventing condensation on the inside.

"This is particularly important whenever several persons are inside the tent," says Abes. "Moisture vapor from the occupants passes through the cotton walls and ceiling to the outside. Unless the fabric 'breathes,' humidity builds up and makes campers uncomfortable."

Abes says that the cotton "breathability" factor has become so widely recognized by tent manufacturers that most nylon family camping tents made today have cotton roofs.

Cotton also offers advantages in wet weather, says Abes. "Cotton tent fabrics swell when it rains and resist water penetration."

Abes says new developments from weaving mills, fabric finishers, and the manufacturers of textile finishing chemicals are improving cotton performance in outdoor fabrics.

"Consumer preferences and industry finishing practices both point toward a continuing increase of cotton's market share of the important U.S. tent market.," he adds.

Cattle feedlot tour is planned for July 29

MEXICO, Mo.--A gutter-flushed barn, comparisons of beef carcasses graded by the old and new USDA grade standards, and a 200-acre corn irrigation setup will be included in a July 29 tour of one of Missouri's most concentrated cattle feeding sections.

Tours will begin from 9:30 to 11:00 a.m. at Lewis Wilsons' farm near Thompson. Lewis and his son Warren are feeding about 1,600 head of cattle a year.

"A highlight will be their gutter-flushed building that has been in operation for 18 months," said Homer Sewell, University of Missouri-Columbia extension cattle feeding specialist.

"The lagoon that holds the waste from the building will be pumped to irrigate 50 acres of corn with a traveling gun. Some 4,000 feet of pipe has been laid underground to irrigate the fieid."

Next stop on the tour will be the Baker Packing Plant in Mexico where beef carcasses graded by the old and new U.S. Department of Agriculture grade standards will be compared.

"We plan to pair up some cattle from Wilson's lot to use in the carcass grade display," said Sewell. "One of the pair will be left in the lot to compare with the carcass of his slaughtered-mate.

Final stop on the tour will be at Joe and Anthony Becker's farm knear Laddonia. "Like the Wilson's," said Sewell, "these brothers emphasize corn silage and high-moisture grain to finish 300 to 400 cattle a year.

"Last fall they built a reservoir with a capacity of 108 acre feet fed by a stream. Stored water will be used to irrigate 200 acres of cornland with a center pivot system."

Details of the tour are available from Sewell at the Department of Animal Husbandry, University of Missouri, Columbia, Mo. 65201.

Stoneville 213 is leading variety planted in Missouri

HAYTI--Stoneville 213 remains the leading variety planted in Missouri, according to Paul W. Karban, officer-in-charge of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Cotton Classing Office at Havti.

Farmers planted 65 per cent of the state's total acreage to this variety, which is slightly lower than the 70 per cent planted to Stoneville 213 last year.

Deltapine 16 ranked second in usage, accounting for 14 per cent of the acreage planted. Auburn M accounted for seven per cent of the planted acreage. The remaining 14 per cent was made up for various other varieties, including some oil mill seed.

Due to the extensive replanting caused by adverse weather conditions, many farmers had to turn to alternate varieties.

This information was revealed by a recent survey of farmers, ginners and seed dealers throughout the eight cotton-producing counties. This survey is conducted annually by the Cotton Division of the U.S. Department of Agriculture Marketing Service.

The Statistical Reporting Service reported on June 30 that 300,000 acres of cotton were planted in Missouri. This report does not take into consideration the acres that wee abandoned due to poor stands

Cool soybeans make best seed

KANSAS CITY--Cool soybeans make the best seed.

Ideally, temperatures should stay below 50 degrees after the beans reach maturity and before haravest if the seed from these beans is to be of good quality. That's especially true if the seeds are wet.

Two scientists, reporting Thursaday at the annual meeting of the American Phytopathological Society, said soybeans seeds they tested retained their quality (germination of 98 per cent) as long as temperatures were 50 degrees or less. Any warmer than that, and microorganisms grew and began to reduce germination significanty.

T. Scott Abney, plant pathologist, and Virgil D. Luedders, agronomsist, incubated pods at different temperatures and checked for seed infection by seven different fungi.

More than 20 per cent of the seed became infected within four days when the seed was incubated at 68 degrees or above. At 50 degrees, it took at least 10 days for any signs of infection to occur. At less than 50 degrees, infection did not occur at all.

Abney and Luedders are USDA Agricultural Research Service scientists at Purdue University in Lafayette, Ind., and the University of Missouri-Columbia, respectively. They are condcucting further studies on microorganisms, seed viability and relative field emergence.

Griffin is named education consultant

CHARLESTON--The Department of Conservation has named Gordon Griffin as education consultant for southeast Missouri.

Griffin, recently a teacher of English, biology and debate at Charleston High Schoo, has been named the outstanding secondary educator in America and the outstanding science teacher in Missouri.

He will work with teachers in 14 counties--Bollinger, Butler, Cape Girardeau, Dunklin, Madison, Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Perry, Ste. Genevieve, St. Francois, Scott, Stoddard and Wayne.

Education consultants help teacher set up evenvironmental and conservation curriculms. Griffin spend his youth on an island off the coast of Maine before receiving a bachelor's and master's degree from Murray State University in Kentucky.

Griffin replaces Wayne Martin, who has been transferred to Jefferson City to become hunter safety coordinator for the Conservation Department.

Teachers interested in talking with Griffin about the conservation curriculm or conservation education may reach him at 806 Sherman Ave., Charleston, Mo. 63834 or by telephone at 683-6940.

Fast method for finding fireblight disease reported

KANSAS CITY--A faster method of identifying apple and pear tree's resistance to fireblight disease was reported here Tuesday by Universities of Missouri-Columbia plant pathologists. The method edetects the plant's sensitivity to the fireblight toxin.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the American Phytopathological Society, Paul R. Stoffl, A.L. Karr and Robert N. Goodman reported that they had purified the toxin and worked out those conditions that permit estimating the degree of sensitivity of new apple and pear selections to the wilt-inducing toxin.

Now plant breeders can test their new seedlings for resistance to fireblight under conditions of light, temperature and humidity that are optimum for development of the wilt symptom of the disease. Previous experiments had linked resistance to the toxin with resistance to the disease.

Plant, soil analysis aids farmers

By THOMAS BROWN
Area Agronomy Specialist

BLOOMFIELD--The Plant Tissue and Soil Analysis Program is being made available to farmers by the Extension Service again this year. Many problems including soil fertility problems are showing up in crops now, and farmers could help solve such soil problems by taking advantage of this program.

Plant tissue analysis involves the testing of leaves of growing crops to determine just how well fed the plants are. The leaf samples should be taken before or during the early reproductive stage of the crop and before seed development.

A soil test should be taken from the same area represented by the leaf sample at the same time for purposes of comparison. Both leaf and soil samples should be taken to a county University of Missouri Extension Center for testing.

Research has shown that the concentration of nutrients in the growing crop varies according to the available nu trients in the soil. Through research work, concentrations of nutrients needed for good crop yilds have been determined and desired levels established.

When plant analysis shows that some nutrient is below the desired level, it usually indicates a soil fertility problem. In some cases, however, the problem is not this simple. Nutrient levels in the plant may be low even though the levels of the various plant food elements in the soil are adequate.

In such cases, something other than fertility ais the problem. In such situations, a careful field examination usually shows that insects, diseases or nematodes have damaged the root system and limited the plants' ability to utilize available fertility.

In other cases, some unusual physical condition of the soil is found to be the problem. Locating such problems so that control measures acan be taken is very important to the farmer.

The season of the year is approaching when plant tissue and soil tisamples should be taken for analysis from most crops grown in this area.

Samples should be taken from corn fields between emergence and pollination. The best time for taking soybean samples is when the first bloom appears. Samples from cotton fields should be taken before tbolls start to set on the plants. Sorghum samples should be taken when the head is fully emerged but before pollination.

Additional information pertaining to this program may be obtained at University of Missouri Extension Centers. A publication titled Sampling Plant Tissue and Soil for Analysis, which is available upon request at extension centers gives detailed information as to when and how to take samples for each crop grown in this area.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.--A "model" that will help scientists develop plant varieties more resistant to the most complex diseases--inclusing charcoal rot of soybeans--was revealed here Friday.

University of Missouri-Columbia plant pathologists reported that they have develoed techniques to determine the level of a plant's resistance to "non'specific" pathogens. These pathogens are general disease-causing organisms that are not controlled by individual plant genes.

Thomas D. Wyllie, A.M . Moustafa and G. E. Short told the American Phylopathological Society that their methods for finding resistance to these non-specific pathogens were better than the standard techniques now being used.

Current methods just measure how fast the organism grows and attacks dead tissues. The UMC methods whow the plant's resistance (or lack of it) by measuring the finer points of the organism's growth in both live and dead tissues of the plant.

The UMC researchers specifically studied the charcoal rot pathogen, a fungus that produces a serious disease of soybeans. Typical of non-specific pathogens, this fungus is parasitic (attacks live tissue) and saprophitic (attacks deead tissue). And it is increasing its numbers in soils, thus becoming an even greater nemesis the next spring.

The UMC researchers believe that their model for indentifying plants resistant of charcoal rot and other diseases caused by non-specific pathogens will help plant breeders develop varieties more resistant to these type diseases.

Wet weather takes toll

By JOE SCOTT
State Agronomy Specialist

PORTAGEVILLE-More cotton acreage disappears every week, as heavy rains and weeds take their toll. It appears now that the cotton crop may drop under the 200,000-acre mark in Missouri.

Some of the later coton will need a lot of sunshine the next couple of months to produce a crop worth harvesting.

Weeds are a problem in quite a few fields and growers are having to disconti nue the use of DSMA and MSMA as cotton begins to bloom.

Cotton is reaching the stage where lay-by applications can be made. Karmex, Dynex, Cotoran, Lanex, Caparol or Lorox can be used as lay-by treatments. Add a surfactant if weeds are present.

Remember not to exceed an accumulated total of 3.2 pounds per year of diuron, fluometuron and linuron. So if you have beer using diuron (Karmex, etc.) or fluometuron (Cotoran, Lanex) as per-emergents and as postemergents be sure to add up total amount of actual material applied

More probe is being used this year and has given good control of hard to kill weeds-like teaweed, cocklebur, velvetleaf (wild cotton) and spurred anoda when applied postemergence.

Now that cotton is squaring and blooming, fields need to be scouted often for plant bugs, boll weevils and boll worms. Also, spider mites may be showing up in some fields.

Wet conditions are also affecting soybeans and some are being lost in fields that have been flooded. Pemiscot County farmers recently lost 20 per cent or more of their soybeans after heavy rains.

Weeds are a problem in soybeans. Questions concerning blooming dates of soybeans, as when to apply 2,4-DB (Butyrac, Butoxone) as a salve operation are being asked.

Mid-season varieties , like York, Dare, Forrest and Mack, planted the first week in May wshould have been blooming July 10-15 , middle of May plantings will be blooming Juy 15-20. May 25-30 plantings should be blooming the last week in July and first week in August. Blooming has been a little later than normal due to the unusual season.

Full season varieties, such as Pickett, Lee and Davis, planted the first of May should be blooming by July 25. May 15 plantings will be blooming around Aug. 1 at the Delta Center, according to data compiled by Dr. Grover Shannon, soybean breeder at the center.

Cotton grows in tent use

NEW YORK--Tents are mostly cotton--and they're geting more and more that way.

According to industry sources, cotton's share of the tent market this year has risen to 70 per cent--up from the 60 per cent share of one year ago.

"Cotton use in tent fabrics is running two-to-one over its nearest competitor, nylon," says Richard Abes, director of home fabrics and industrial marketing for Cotton Inc., the fiber marketing and research company of U.S. cotton producers.

Major reason for cotton's dominance of the tent market, says Abes, is reflected in a recent statement from American Waterproofing Corp.

"Cotton tents are better," says a spokesman for the firm. "They give the camper what he looks for in a tent."

A spokesman for National Canvas Products, a tent manufacturer and finisher, adds, "The experienced camper prefers cotton. Many who purchased all-nylon camping tents in the past are not satisfied."

Abes explains that cotton tent fabrics "breathe." The air permeability of the fabric allows moisture vapor to pass outside the tent, thereby preventing condensation on the inside.

"This is particularly important whenever several persons are inside the tent," says Abes. "Moisture vapor from the occupants passes through the cotton walls and ceiling to the outside. Unless the fabric 'breathes,' humidity builds up and makes campers uncomfortable."

Abes says that the cotton "breathability" factor has become so widely recognized by tent manufacturers that most nylon family camping tents made today have cotton roofs.

Cotton also offers advantages in wet weather, says Abes. "Cotton tent fabrics swell when it rains and resist water penetration."

Abes says new developments from weaving mills, fabric finishers, and the manufacturers of textile finishing chemicals are improving cotton performance in outdoor fabrics.

"Consumer preferences and industry finishing practices both point toward a continuing increase of cotton's market share of the important U.S. tent market.," he adds.

Cattle feedlot tour is planned for July 29

MEXICO, Mo.--A gutter-flushed barn, comparisons of beef carcasses graded by the old and new USDA grade standards, and a 200-acre corn irrigation setup will be included in a July 29 tour of one of Missouri's most concentrated cattle feeding sections.

Tours will begin from 9:30 to 11:00 a.m. at Lewis Wilsons' farm near Thompson. Lewis and his son Warren are feeding about 1,600 head of cattle a year.

"A highlight will be their gutter-flushed building that has been in operation for 18 months," said Homer Sewell, University of Missouri-Columbia extension cattle feeding specialist.

"The lagoon that holds the waste from the building will be pumped to irrigate 50 acres of corn with a traveling gun. Some 4,000 feet of pipe has been laid underground to irrigate the fieid."

Next stop on the tour will be the Baker Packing Plant in Mexico where beef carcasses graded by the old and new U.S. Department of Agriculture grade standards will be compared.

"We plan to pair up some cattle from Wilson's lot to use in the carcass grade display," said Sewell. "One of the pair will be left in the lot to compare with the carcass of his slaughtered-mate.

Final stop on the tour will be at Joe and Anthony Becker's farm knear Laddonia. "Like the Wilson's," said Sewell, "these brothers emphasize corn silage and high-moisture grain to finish 300 to 400 cattle a year.

"Last fall they built a reservoir with a capacity of 108 acre feet fed by a stream. Stored water will be used to irrigate 200 acres of cornland with a center pivot system."

Details of the tour are available from Sewell at the Department of Animal Husbandry, University of Missouri, Columbia, Mo. 65201.

Stoneville 213 is leading variety planted in Missouri

HAYTI--Stoneville 213 remains the leading variety planted in Missouri, according to Paul W. Karban, officer-in-charge of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Cotton Classing Office at Havti.

Farmers planted 65 per cent of the state's total acreage to this variety, which is slightly lower than the 70 per cent planted to Stoneville 213 last year.

Deltapine 16 ranked second in usage, accounting for 14 per cent of the acreage planted. Auburn M accounted for seven per cent of the planted acreage. The remaining 14 per cent was made up for various other varieties, including some oil mill seed.

Due to the extensive replanting caused by adverse weather conditions, many farmers had to turn to alternate varieties.

This information was revealed by a recent survey of farmers, ginners and seed dealers throughout the eight cotton-producing counties. This survey is conducted annually by the Cotton Division of the U.S. Department of Agriculture Marketing Service.

The Statistical Reporting Service reported on June 30 that 300,000 acres of cotton were planted in Missouri. This report does not take into consideration the acres that wee abandoned due to poor stands

Cool soybeans make best seed

KANSAS CITY--Cool soybeans make the best seed.

Ideally, temperatures should stay below 50 degrees after the beans reach maturity and before haravest if the seed from these beans is to be of good quality. That's especially true if the seeds are wet.

Two scientists, reporting Thursaday at the annual meeting of the American Phytopathological Society, said soybeans seeds they tested retained their quality (germination of 98 per cent) as long as temperatures were 50 degrees or less. Any warmer than that, and microorganisms grew and began to reduce germination significanty.

T. Scott Abney, plant pathologist, and Virgil D. Luedders, agronomsist, incubated pods at different temperatures and checked for seed infection by seven different fungi.

More than 20 per cent of the seed became infected within four days when the seed was incubated at 68 degrees or above. At 50 degrees, it took at least 10 days for any signs of infection to occur. At less than 50 degrees, infection did not occur at all.

Abney and Luedders are USDA Agricultural Research Service scientists at Purdue University in Lafayette, Ind., and the University of Missouri-Columbia, respectively. They are condcucting further studies on microorganisms, seed viability and relative field emergence.

Griffin is named education consultant

CHARLESTON--The Department of Conservation has named Gordon Griffin as education consultant for southeast Missouri.

Griffin, recently a teacher of English, biology and debate at Charleston High Schoo, has been named the outstanding secondary educator in America and the outstanding science teacher in Missouri.

He will work with teachers in 14 counties--Bollinger, Butler, Cape Girardeau, Dunklin, Madison, Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Perry, Ste. Genevieve, St. Francois, Scott, Stoddard and Wayne.

Education consultants help teacher set up evenvironmental and conservation curriculms. Griffin spend his youth on an island off the coast of Maine before receiving a bachelor's and master's degree from Murray State University in Kentucky.

Griffin replaces Wayne Martin, who has been transferred to Jefferson City to become hunter safety coordinator for the Conservation Department.

Teachers interested in talking with Griffin about the conservation curriculm or conservation education may reach him at 806 Sherman Ave., Charleston, Mo. 63834 or by telephone at 683-6940.

Fast method for finding fireblight disease reported

KANSAS CITY--A faster method of identifying apple and pear tree's resistance to fireblight disease was reported here Tuesday by Universities of Missouri-Columbia plant pathologists. The method edetects the plant's sensitivity to the fireblight toxin.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the American Phytopathological Society, Paul R. Stoffl, A.L. Karr and Robert N. Goodman reported that they had purified the toxin and worked out those conditions that permit estimating the degree of sensitivity of new apple and pear selections to the wilt-inducing toxin.

Now plant breeders can test their new seedlings for resistance to fireblight under conditions of light, temperature and humidity that are optimum for development of the wilt symptom of the disease. Previous experiments had linked resistance to the toxin with resistance to the disease.

MASDA adopts ag resolution

JEFFERSON CITY--Adopting resolutions dealing with brucellosis eradication, Lock and Dam 26 on the Mississippi River and a phasing out of meat imports were among the major actions recently taken during the Midwest Association of State Depatments of Agriculture (MASDA) meeting in Springfield, Ill. Representing Missouri's Department of Agriculture were Director B. Boillot and Deputy Director J.W. Abbott.

The brucellosis eradication resolution recommended that all states and the U.S. Department of Agriculture continue their efforts to eradicate the disease rather than compromise with a control program. The rsesolution also called for USDA to enforce all quarantine and movement regulations involving the interstate movement of infected or exposed cattle originating in high-incidence states.

The resolution supporting construction of a new lock and dam system to replace Lock and Dam 26 near Alton, Ill., calls for a 1,200-foot lock to be located downstream from the present system. Representatives at the meeting noted that Midwest agriculture depends on a modern Mississippi riverway to get its products to the Gulf ports, and that one step in keeping the vital lifeline open would be the construction of the new lock and dam.

The various state departments of agriculture agreed that the 1964 Meat Import Act needs to be amended to decrease imports of meat and meat products "at such times as domestic supplies reach levels causing financial loss the the U.S. producers." The directors explained, through the resolution, that the purpose of the 1964 act was to "provide for continuous supplies of high quality meat and meat products to the consuming public."

In commenting about the meeting, Boillot said, "The resolutions that were adopted by the group have to be the best aggregate set in recent years. All the departments are faced with similar concerns, and this was the first time that unanimity was reached in voicing those concerns."

"EPA's new regulations will have far reaching effects on Missouri agriculture," Boillot said. "They will establish pollution standards with which we all must comply."

Summer cold might be a pollen allergy

PUEBLO, Colo.--If you have a summer cold that hangs on and on, you might just be dealing with a pollen allergy. The Deapartment of Health, Education and Welfaere says it's important to consult a docor about any respiratoy illness lasting longer than a week, for a correct diagnosis and treatment.

Maybe you're one of the more than 14 million Americans who suffer seasonal symptoms commonly but incorrectly thought of as "hay fever." If you ususpect so, you may be interested in a new HEW booklet that will answer your questions about pollen allergy. For a copy of Pollen Allergy, send 40 cents to Consumer Information Center, Dept. 33, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

Some of the symptoms of pollen allergy include sneezing a lot, a runny or stuffy nose, itchy eyes, nose and throat, watery eyes and conjunctivitis.

When the doctor suspects you might have this allergy, you may be given skin tests to identify which pollens are responsible.

Once diagnosed, three methods are used to treat an allergy: avoidance of the allergen; medcations; and allergy shots. You can avoid the allergens by getting away from the area where they are common or by staying in buildings with filtered air. If you can't avoid such allergens, medications such as antihistamines will control many symptoms, including sneezing, itching in the nose and throat and nasal discharge.

Occasional use of nose drops or sprays can also provide temporary relief. Allergy shots are also used to prevent the uncomfortable symptoms, but no actual cure has yet beenfound.

Pollen Allergy (40 cents) is one of over 240 selected federal publcations listed in the summrer edition of the free catalog, Consumer Information. Published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration. A free copy of the catalog is available by writing Consumer Information, Center, Pueblo, Coolo. 81009.

"I've got five, do I hear six, give me six, give me six, give me six, six, six, this is a real fine chair, folks, I want six . . ."

It was a hot, sultry day in Southeast Missouri, and the heat droned on along with the voices of the two 18-year-old girls. Their auctioneer's chatter kept up for three and a half hours, until the novice auctioneering team of Myra Mills and Robyn Hale had finished the sale.

Robyn, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hale,123 Baker Lane, and Myra, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mills, 610 Dorothy St., launched their career as auctioneers July 10 with a sale that was their baby, from acquiring the items to be auctioned to that final cry of "sold".

Both girls say the auction was a profitable venture, but the memory of all the work that went into the auction at the former Jim Kelley home east of Sikeston still has them feeling a little dizzy.

The girls were responsible for advertising the auction, lining up the goods to be sold, and picking up the consignments (possessions which the auctioneer sells for the owner -- at a commission, of course.)

"There were 122 consignments," says Myra. "I remember because it took us so long to tag them all. And there was tons of other stuff we sold."

Then, after setting out all the items and readying them for sale, came the actual auction, which, surprisingly, did not make either girl hoarse. After the auction, the girls had to stay at the farm and clean up and help buyers load up the sold goods.

It was a lot of work, but it was worth it. In addition to the monetary gains from the sale, the girls received a dozen red roses from a man in Illinois who had been one of their classmates at the Reisch Worldwide College of Auctioneering at Mason City, Ia.

Robyn and Myra attended the school for two weeks in June. They stayed in a motel because the school only had dormitory capacity for ten female students, and had enrolled 15 for the June session, which the girls says was the most ever.

For 12 hours every day except Sunday, when they had a welcome repreieve, Robyn and Myra learned to scream out the drills to build up the sale chatter. The girls say the crowd is not supposed to be able to distinguish words in the sales pitch, other than prices.

"It's more your personality and poise than what you're actually saying," Robyn explains.

In addition to voice volume, the students at the school were taught the proper breathing techniques, and posture to accompany their auction presentation.

During the day, the students practiced auctioneering, and at night, they heard lectures on the legal aspects of conducting a sale, legal requirements in various states for auctioneering (Missouri has no real requirements to be an auctioneer) and the dynamics of selling.

They also learned the proper combination of courtesy and aggression which makes a successful acutioneer.

Myra says the most difficult part of their training was getting up in front of people. Being the only girls in their smaller classes added to their anxiety, but they say the men at the school "went out of their way to be nice."

Robyn, a freckled blonde, and Myra, a freckled redhead, look enough alike that I asked them if they are related. The answer is no, but the look that passed between them told me that was not the first time someone has asked the question.

"Everybody wants to know if we are sisters," admits Robyn.

Both girls said they like auctioneering enough to pursue it as a career, but both plan to begin college this fall, Robyn at Southern Methodist University at Dallas, Tex. and Myra at Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau. Both want to study agriculture.

The girls, who are 1976 graduates of Sikeston Senior High School, have two other sales lined up for this fall. One is an antique sale at Franklin Grove, Ill. and the other will be a sale of antique cars at Dover, Tenn.

The girls say they want to work up their speed for the sale chatter. "We're supposed to practice every day," says Robyn.

They have been helped along by Robyn's father, Robert Hale, of Hale Auction Co., Sikeston Route Two. But their style and their determination are all their own.

Robyn and Myra definitely plan to continue their auctioneering careers for money and roses, who wouldn't?

Do I hear six?

Girls make a bid for sales career

A good crowd turned out for the auction conducted by Myra Mills and Robyn Hale of Sikeston, despite high temperatures, to bid on household items, furniture, and even puppies.

Pat Suzuki of Cape Girardeau, left, was clerk for the acution, but Myra was the one who got to exercise her vocal chords.

Equal rights in Israel will be a struggle

NEW YORK (AP) — Tamar Eshel is treading a fine line. One misstep, she believes, could have cataclysmic effects on her homeland.

Mrs. Eshel is general secretary of the Working Women's Council — the largest women's organization in Israel. And in that role she is trying to assure equality for Israeli women without dividing society over practices that are ruled by Jewish, Christian and Moslem religious laws.

"A people under seige, as we are, can ill afford a cultural campaign that would divide the people," Mrs. Eshel said in an interview here en route to a meeting of the International Council of Women in Vancouver, Canada.

Religious laws govern marriage and divorce practices in Israel and define personal status. For instance, there is still no such thing as a civil marriage ceremony in the state.

"Religious law and personal status are not so important compared with what remains to be done," Mrs. Eshel said. "But we can find a way to make the uses of these laws modern if we cannot change them."

Her group chooses to fight for changes in other areas, she said.

"It is only this year, for example, that we have managed to eliminate different pay scales for men and for women in industry," she said. "The unions have said they will sign no more contracts unless the scales are equal."

Only 34 per cent of the women in Israel are employed, she said, and one reason is that a large proportion are untrained and unskilled.

"We have found that 75 per cent of the women who have academic training do work, and so we are trying to educate and train those who have none," Mrs. Eshel said.

The Working Women's Council — with help from groups like Pioneer Women, the women's labor Zionist organization of America, which Mrs. Eshel was visiting here — is building day care centers, boarding schools for children without homes, providing adult education programs and lobbying for more public schooling.

How to detect kids on drugs

Dear Ann Landers: Will you please mention the symptoms to look for so parents can tell whether or not a child is on drugs?

We realize you have devoted a lot of time and space to this problem in the past, but our children were younger then and it didn't have much meaning to us. We know now we should have clipped those columns when they appeared, but believe me, Ann, when parents look at their nine- and ten-year- olds they never think those kids are going to grow up to be drug addicts.

Also, if it turns out that a child does happen to be "on something," what should parents do? Please, Ann, help us. I'm sure you can tell from the tone of this letter that we are -- Worried Sick.

Dear Worred: Pot smoking can be easily detected because the room has an odor of sickeningly sweet tobacco. Kids who smoke large amounts of high-grade (uncut) pot often become red-eyed, runny-nosed, lethargic, zombie-like, lazy, unmotivated, unkept and have a "what-the- hell" attitude about many things.

They may also get into auto accidents because their vision and sense of timing are impaired.

Pill-popping can make kids high or low – depending on what they pop. If it's uppers, they're high. If it's downers, they're subdued. Parents who notice wide personality swings should be alert to the possibility that their child may be on both.

L.S.D. is a hallucinogenic and produces wild trips. When the trip is over the crash can result in unconsciousness, deep depression, nausea, vomiting and the worst imaginable "hangover."

Heroin users often wear dark glasses during the day and keep their arms covered to avoid displaying the needle marks. The best clues are the equipment which most parents find sooner or later. This consists of a syringe, needles, bent spoons, and a small hotplate for heating.

Parents who suspect their children are on drugs should seek help from the nearest drug abuse center. Contact the city or county mental health center for details -- and God be with you.

Dear Ann Landers: My charming and attractive 24-year- old sister-in- law is planning to be married this fall to a 28-year- old man. She has accepted an engagement ring from him although they've known each other less than five months.

Suddenly, Tillie is aware that her fiance lacks the knowledge of the niceties of life. His table manners are an embarrassment. She insists she will retrain him once they are married. I notice, however, they always seem to be arguing about some klutzy thing he has done.

We suggested to Tillie that she push back the wedding date, but she ignores us. How can we make her see that small irritants befoire marriage will become magnified after?

What advice do you have for Tillie? She reds your column regularly and respects your judgment. -- Family And Friends.

Dear F and F: I have no advice for Tillie. She didn't ask for nay. If she is a regular reader of my column, she has seen the phrase, "Marriage is not a reform school." As for you, "Family and Friends," my advice is MYOB or Tillie will move the date up -- instead of back.

Parents, what should you do if your teenager is having sexual relations? Ann Lander's new booklet, "High School Sex And How To Deal With It – A Guide For Teens And Their Parents," gives no-nonsense advice on how to handle this delicate situation. For each booklet, send 50 cents in coin plus a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120.

We suggested to Tillie that she push back the wedding date, but she ignores us. How can we make her see that small irritants befoire marriage will become magnified after?

What advice do you have for Tillie? She reds your column regularly and respects your judgment. -- Family And Friends.

Dear F and F: I have no advice for Tillie. She didn't ask for nay. If she is a regular reader of my column, she has seen the phrase, "Marriage is not a reform school." As for you, "Family and Friends," my advice is MYOB or Tillie will move the date up -- instead of back.

Parents, what should you do if your teenager is having sexual relations? Ann Lander's new booklet, "High School Sex And How To Deal With It -- A Guide For Teens And Their Parents," gives no-nonsense advice on how to handle this delicate situation. For each booklet, send 50 cents in coin plus a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120.

Where the boys are: suits and sweaters

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK — (NEA) — You have Donny and Bobby to thank for it. Osmond and Vinton, that is.

Together, boyswear manufacturers say, they're responsible for the three-piece suit fever heating up the boyswear market for fall.

Just take little Kevin and his older brother, Daryl, shopping for school clothes and see if you get away without buying a coordinated slack, blazer and vest for each of them.

And not just in the usual corduroy, although there's still plenty around. That ribless corduroy outfit, for instance, looks just like velvet. Of course, there's real velvet, too, and suede sateen. Plus flannel, that's very big this year and the usual blends.

Now, how do you feel about these fabrics in mauve, mint, French blue or rust? And a multitude of plaids as well?

What's more important is how Kevin and Daryl feel about them and all accounts indicate that fashion colors are doing nicely.

Kevin would look nice, as a matter of fact, in a plaid of rust, white and blue with a vest that reverses to a solid.

Naturally, that rules out a plaid for Daryl because he wouldn't be caught dead in something remotely similar to what his kid brother is wearing.

From the way he lopes around, hooking his finger into his belt, though, Daryl is still a jean man anyway.

So, put Kevin in plaid and let Daryl try on an indigo blue denim three-piece suit. Maybe the one stitched in orange with the braiding on the pockets. Whichever it is, it won't have that faded, tie-dye look. Denim is straightening up; getting cleaner and neater. (If only Daryl would. . .)

With tee shirts, there's no problem. Kevin still likes Snoopy, bless him, and Daryl thinks he's Doctor Spock. He'll probably want a citizen's band radio shirt, too.

In any case, you can fill in with velour turtle and mock turtle neck tops, a heat-transfer print shirt, though they're losing their popularity, and, for a sharp look in a sweater, a rally, rugby or regular stripe.

Both boys have fishermen sweaters in their closets, and, if you can fix the snag Kevin got when he beat up Cynthia Pellman, he won't need a new one just yet. Maybe a lightweight, synthetic v-neck pullover in a snowflake pattern until the weather gets cold. And that red wool with the airplane motif.

Don't worry about coordination. Boyswear manufacturers are following the separate but "interminglable" doctrine that governs women's sportswear.

Just be wary of one thing. When Daryl sees that split cowhide jacket with the real fleece lining and the overpowering price tag, he's going to go into high gear. So try to steer him towards the imitation cotton suede with pile lining, or maybe an all-weather coat with zip-out lining. His pack vest still fits but he could use a new featherweight nylon flyer's jacket, in a bright yellow, perhaps.

It's a melton toggle coat, lined and hooded, for Kevin. Probably in olive instead of camel; it won't show the knocks so much.

Finally, make sure the boys get invited to at least one wedding, christening or bar mitzvah — something so that they get to wear those three-piece suits. You know what's going to happen if Donny and Bobby ever stop wearing them.

Television stars have sparked interest in three-piece suits. This gray tweed with vest has darker gray accent buttons. By Chips 'N Twigs.

Fresher coffee from the freezer

By Polly Cramer

Inflation Fighter

DEAR POLLY — Coffee is now so expensive. My mother gave me an idea for keeping it tasting fresh even after it is a few days old. Rather than brew a fresh pot each day (I only drink one or two cups), I make a full pot and have my one cup. I pour the remaining coffee into a glass percolator or jar and let it cool. Then I put it in the refrigerator.

Whenever I want a cup of coffee I pour only the needed amount into a small pot and warm it. This keeps what remains free of that stale coffee taste that develops from standing in a metal percolator. It saves time, helps conserve and cuts down on my food bill. —OLGA.

Sweet 16 and a millionaire

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Name a singer who has been written about in the Wall Street Journal and Time magazine, whose concerts in Japan and France are sellouts, who has outsold The Beatles and Elvis Presley in Canada, who has made three movies and who is a confirmed millionaire.

The answer: Rene Simard.

All that, and the rotten kid won't be 16 until next February.

Maybe you haven't heard of Rene, but you will. He's all set to invade the United States, and he's confident the reception here will be as warm as it's been everyplace else. He's even confident that his recent voice change — all his big hits were done in his boy soprano which is gone forever — won't slow him down.

He's a smallish, ever-smiling boy with the thick French accent common to the French-speaking part of Canada. He is learning English now, since he's moved to Los Angeles, but it is still far from perfect.

I asked him a question containing the word "restrictions," and he seized on it. He didn't know the word and wanted to know all about it — what it meant, how to pronounce it.

Later, he was talking about the type of buildings in his native Quebec, and used the word "architecture." Only he pronounced it "arshiteshture."

"No, it's architecture."

"Architeshure?"

He couldn't say it. He laughed. He laughs a lot. He's obviously a happy kid, which is only natural. He has the world by the tail.

Rene comes from an island — l'Orleans — in the St. Lawrence River about six miles from Quebec City. His father is a chef at the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec's most famous hotel.

He sang as a toddler, but that wasn't unusual. Everybody in the family sang, and he was the sixth of seven children, so he heard a lot of music as he toddled.

"My brothers and sisters sing," he says, "and my mother and father sing. But nobody likes it like me."

When he was 7, his mother suggested he enter a big amateur contest in Quebec.

"My father didn't want me to do it," Rene says. "He didn't think I was good enough and was afraid I would lose and that would hurt me. But maman prevailed."

It was a lengthy contest, in three stages. The whole affair lasted a year, and when it was over. Rene Simard was the grand winner.

One of his prizes was a ten-week engagement on a Canadian television program from Montreal. On his first TV show, he was spotted by a lady who thought he was so good — "she said I sang like an angel" — that she immediately called her son, who was an important talent manager.

He was off and running. Within a year, Rene was a recording star and quickly became the biggest thing in Canada.

He sings mostly "ballades," although he likes rock and sings it privately. But in public, and on records, his thing is sweet music, and the public gobbles it up. Maybe it's a kind of rock backlash, and his fans — all ages, he says — are the ones who are tired of rock.

So Rene sings about his family, about puppy love, about Christmas and things like that. Each record seems to sell better than the previous one. He's made nearly a dozen albums, and they all sell around three quarters of a million copies — phenomenal in Canada.

About a year ago, the decision was reached — he had gone about as far as he could go in Canada. His fame had leaked around the world, to France, to Japan, a trickle in the United States. But he needed new worlds to conquer, and the biggest world of all was America.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Since you are a doctor who believes in prevention I would like to ask your point of view. My husband had a blood profile in October. Much to our surprise his triglycerides were 532 and his cholesterol was something like 289. His doctor put him on Atromid-S., two in the morning and two at night. He is also on a low fat diet which he follows faithfully.

In less than three months his triglycerides dropped from 532 to 130 and his cholesterol from 284 to 232. His weight dropped from 198 to 175. His blood pressure is 124 over 84.

The doctor said that he should take the Atromid-S for the rest of his life and in the same dosage. We really thought that the doctor would decrease the amount of Atromid-S but he said that my husband's system would just build up the blood fats again if he were to discontinue the Atromid-S.

What exactly is Atromid-S? Is it a drug and does it have side effects? Is it harmful over a long period of time?

My husband carefully restricts saturated fats. He feels very well but feels cold more than he did before. Would it be all right for my husband to take only one Atromid-S in the morning and one at night and then have another blood test in about three months to see how he is doing? We are not even in the habit of taking aspirin but I know my husband wants to do what is best for him.

DEAR READER — Since your doctor has been so successful in helping your husband to significantly improve his health you should have confidence in him and his recommendations. Your husband has done very well indeed and has greatly decreased his chances of having a premature heart attack or stroke.

That 23-pound weight loss is most important. I would encourage him to go ahead and lose any excess fat he has around his waist. You do that by continuing on a diet that restricts calories and maintaining plenty of good physical activity.

It is hard to say how much of the improvement is from the weight loss and diet and how much is from Atromid-S. The treatment of your husband, though, is that usually recommended by specialists for patients with the findings of a high blood fat level (triglycerides) and high cholesterol. I would be concerned that if your husband regained his weight his results might not be so good.

Atromid-S causes side effects in some people. The length of time your husband has taken the medicine without any of these tells me that he will have no trouble with the medication. I do not think you should cut down on the medicine unless it is in agreement with your doctor. If your husband has any more fat he can eliminate, do that first and then ask your doctor again if you could try it with diet alone. Most people are just the opposite. They want to eat to their heart's content and take a pill to solve the problem. They usually do not have the same self-discipline your husband has.

I am sending you The Health Letter, number 1-3, Diet, Preventing Atherosclerosis. Others who want this information can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. Just send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Treat for Kids

Melt 6 oz. semi-sweet chocolate with 3 tablespoons vegetable shortening; mix well. Insert tongue depressors into one end of about 6 peeled bananas and dip each into chocolate mixture. Roll in roasted diced almonds (about 1 cup) and place on foil to freeze.

What's the difference between herbs and spices? Herbs are leaves and sometimes the flowers of aromatic plants grown in temperate zones. Spices, on the other hand, come from aromatic plants grown in the tropics. How 'bout that??

"My father didn't want me to do it," Rene says. "He didn't think I was good enough and was afraid I would lose and that would hurt me. But maman prevailed."

It was a lengthy contest, in three stages. The whole affair lasted a year, and when it was over. Rene Simard was the grand winner.

One of his prizes was a ten-week engagement on a Canadian television program from Montreal. On his first TV show, he was spotted by a lady who thought he was so good — "she said I sang like an angel" — that she immediately called her son, who was an important talent manager.

He was off and running. Within a year, Rene was a recording star and quickly became the biggest thing in Canada.

He sings mostly "ballades," although he likes rock and sings it privately. But in public, and on records, his thing is sweet music, and the public gobbles it up. Maybe it's a kind of rock backlash, and his fans — all ages, he says — are the ones who are tired of rock.

So Rene sings about his family, about puppy love, about Christmas and things like that. Each record seems to sell better than the previous one. He's made nearly a dozen albums, and they all sell around three quarters of a million copies — phenomenal in Canada.

About a year ago, the decision was reached — he had gone about as far as he could go in Canada. His fame had leaked around the world, to France, to Japan, a trickle in the United States. But he needed new worlds to conquer, and the biggest world of all was America.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Since you are a doctor who believes in prevention I would like to ask your point of view. My husband had a blood profile in October. Much to our surprise his triglycerides were 532 and his cholesterol was something like 289. His doctor put him on Atromid-S., two in the morning and two at night. He is also on a low fat diet which he follows faithfully.

In less than three months his triglycerides dropped from 532 to 130 and his cholesterol from 284 to 232. His weight dropped from 198 to 175. His blood pressure is 124 over 84.

The doctor said that he should take the Atromid-S for the rest of his life and in the same dosage. We really thought that the doctor would decrease the amount of Atromid-S but he said that my husband's system would just build up the blood fats again if he were to discontinue the Atromid-S.

What exactly is Atromid-S? Is it a drug and does it have side effects? Is it harmful over a long period of time?

My husband carefully restricts saturated fats. He feels very well but feels cold more than he did before. Would it be all right for my husband to take only one Atromid-S in the morning and one at night and then have another blood test in about three months to see how he is doing? We are not even in the habit of taking aspirin but I know my husband wants to do what is best for him.

DEAR READER — Since your doctor has been so successful in helping your husband to significantly improve his health you should have confidence in him and his recommendations. Your husband has done very well indeed and has greatly decreased his chances of having a premature heart attack or stroke.

That 23-pound weight loss is most important. I would encourage him to go ahead and lose any excess fat he has around his waist. You do that by continuing on a diet that restricts calories and maintaining plenty of good physical activity.

It is hard to say how much of the improvement is from the weight loss and diet and how much is from Atromid-S. The treatment of your husband, though, is that usually recommended by specialists for patients with the findings of a high blood fat level (triglycerides) and high cholesterol. I would be concerned that if your husband regained his weight his results might not be so good.

Atromid-S causes side effects in some people. The length of time your husband has taken the medicine without any of these tells me that he will have no trouble with the medication. I do not think you should cut down on the medicine unless it is in agreement with your doctor. If your husband has any more fat he can eliminate, do that first and then ask your doctor again if you could try it with diet alone. Most people are just the opposite. They want to eat to their heart's content and take a pill to solve the problem. They usually do not have the same self-discipline your husband has.

I am sending you The Health Letter, number 1-3, Diet, Preventing Atherosclerosis. Others who want this information can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. Just send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Melt 6 oz. semi-sweet chocolate with 3 tablespoons vegetable shortening; mix well. Insert tongue depressors into one end of about 6 peeled bananas and dip each into chocolate mixture. Roll in roasted diced almonds (about 1 cup) and place on foil to freeze.

What's the difference between herbs and spices? Herbs are leaves and sometimes the flowers of aromatic plants grown in temperate zones. Spices, on the other hand, come from aromatic plants grown in the tropics. How 'bout that??

A peace that's too expensive

By Dr. Arthur C. Fulbright

The modern peace-of- mind cult that puts peace of mind as the major goal in life is particularly appealing to those who are so tired and bored or disgusted with life that they want to lie down. The recent flood of books on "How to Relax," "How to Quit Worrying" etc. are symptoms of a weary generation which has lost the great meaning and challenge of life.

It is revealing to note the enormous amount of money and energy that is spent by millions of Americans in the quest for peace. A large part of the cost of alcoholic beverages, which runs into billions of dollars, several times as much as is spent on churches and education, is spent because alcohol is anesthetic . It deadens one's nerves, puts one's mind and conscience to sleep, makes one lie down even when standing up or driving an automobile.

There were over 50,000 people killed in automobile accidents last year and traffic experts tell us that many of them lost their lives because someone was lying down at the wheel. This is what makes alcohol so deadly and fatal. It is the perverted fortitude of folly.

The alcoholic peace is a false peace, that is indeed to costly. When the effects wear off after the accident has happened, after silly words are said and the foolish deeds are done, or even after the body and the mind have been put completely to sleep, one is right back where he started, but with an even greater sense of guilt and inadequacy than before. He (or she) has less guts to stand life than ever. Such peace is too expensive.

Wall coverings liven rooms at low cost

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Thoughtful use of wallcoverings can make a dreary room bright, a long room look short and a dull room interesting.

And, for those with limited budgets, a change in wallcovering can achieve an impression of total decoration at a fraction of the cost.

Here are some tips for redecorating with wallcovering from Mrs. Bertha C. Nickel, housing interiors specialist at Oklahoma State University here:

—A boldly patterned wallcovering with large flowers, graphics or the look of tapestry can make a sparsely furnished room appear more cozy.

—High ceilings can be lowered with dark colors, or dramatic designs on the walls, and low ceilings can be raised with vertical stripes.

—Ugly pipes and ducts can be camouflaged by covering them with paint or wallcoverings to match the walls or ceiling.

—For a room without a view, add one in the form of a mural.

—In the kitchen matching vinyl wallcoverings on cabinets, ceiling, and window shades create a festive atmosphere.

—For a small, dull room, select a stunning wallcovering and use matching fabrics for curtains and slipcovers. But limit colors and quantity of furnishings because when a small room becomes too busy, it seems smaller.

—Wallcoverings in cool blues and greens or in silver foil will make a room seem cool; or coziness can be introduced through calico or gingham in dark browns, yellows and oranges.

"You'll find it easy and fun," Mrs. Nickel says.

SMORGASBORD FARE—Herring Salad from a delightful new cookbook, "Cool Entertaining" by Irma Rhode.

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

How does a person without help manage to give parties and never lose his or her cool?

Of all the people we know who entertain single-handedly, Irma Rhode is the best organized. It's true that she is now retired and has plenty of time, but even when she worked at a full-time job she entertained with the utmost ease.

Rhode's secret is to plan ahead — and to stick to the plan. She tells just how to do this in her new book, "Cool Entertaining." Chapters are devoted to hors d'oeuvres, soups, fish and shellfish, meat and poultry, salads, desserts and drinks that may be served for cold suppers to company. Throughout the book there is a fine concern for practicality and economy.

This system may have as many rewards for you as it has had for Rhode. In his introduction to "Cool Entertaining," James Beard says that he has known Irma Rhode for almost 40 years and that "her enthusiasm, her delight in entertaining and her vast knowledge of food and drink have given her a full, rich life. She is always bubbling . . . her sense of humor is a perpetual delight."

Tried at our house, we found Rhode's Herring Salad delicious to serve at a buffet supper at any time of year.

HERRING SALAD

2-pound turkey hindquarter (cooked, skinned, boned and diced), about 2 cups
3 potatoes (cooked, peeled and diced), about 1½ cups
2 apples (peeled, cored and diced),about 1½ cups
1 can (8½ ounces) beets, drained and minced
3 to 4 small firm dill pickles (minced), about ½ cup
2 tablespoons capers
2 hard-boiled eggs, chopped
1 jar (8 ounces) marinated herring tidbits, drained and minced
Dressing, see below

Mix together well all the ingredients, adding enough of the Dressing to coat them; there should not be any liquid. Refrigerate overnight before serving to allow flavors to blend. Makes 2 quarts plus.

Dressing: Beat together ½ cup salad oil, 1 tablespoon wine vinegar and 2 tablespoons red wine. Dissolve 1 chicken bouillon cube in 3 tablespoons warm water and blend with ½ teaspoon dry mustard; beat into oil mixture.

COME FOR DESSERT!
Dario's Torte Beverage

DARIO'S TORTE

2 tablespoons butter
Finely crushed dried ladyfingers
6 large eggs, separated
1 cup finely grated unblanched almonds
1 cup sugar
Grated rind of 1 orange
2 tablespoons orange juice
Dash of salt

Spread the butter over the inside surface of two round layer-cake pans (each 9 by 1½ inches); dust each with 1 tablespoon of the ladyfinger crumbs. Beat egg yolks until thickened and lemon color; gradually beat in the sugar until thick and ivory color. Fold in 1 cup ladyfinger crumbs, the almonds, orange rind and orange juice. Beat egg whites with the salt until stiff; stir a large spoonful into the egg-yolk mixture; fold in remaining egg whites. Turn into prepared pans. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — about 25 minutes. Turn out on wire racks; cool. Fill and frost as desired; the contributor of this recipe fills the torte with apricot preserves and frosts it with whipped cream — both the preserves and cream flavored with orange liqueur.

Add anchovy paste and minced parsley to mayonnaise and use as a salad dressing.

What's the law?

The case of the amorous employe

By JACK STRUASS, LL.B.

David liked women, and he fought with his wife every time she insisted that he stop his cavorting.

Finally, in desperation, David's wife complained to the head of the city agency that employed David and he was fired from his civil service job on the grounds of conduct unbecoming to a city employe.

Determined to get his job back, David took the matter to court.

"What I did on my own time," he argued, "was my own business. After all, I was married to my wife and not to the city. Consequently, the city had no right to fire me, particularly since my work record was top-notch."

"While he may have been a good worker," responded a city official, "we still had a right to bounce him. When a married man dallies with the dollies, he sets a band example. Even if he does it on his own time, it's still apt to give the city a bad time. After all, the public frowns on such conducvt."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you order the city to give amorous David back his job?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that a city has a legitimate interest in the fundamental standards of propreity to be exercised by its employes. Since the public expects all governmental units to be concerned with the maintenance of good order, concluded the judge, a city employe who engages in improprieties not conducive to good order can be fired for such improprieties regardless of the fact that he may engage in them on his own time.

NEW YORK (AP) — The average 45-year-old woman now can look forward to 33.9 more years of life, according to the Institute of Life Insurance.

It says that when the 1950s were beginning the life expectancy for women that age was 30.6 years.

HOME FURNISHINGS CONSUMERS - STAND UP AND BE COUNTED!

Decorating your first home or redecorating your old one? Lucky you! You've got a great opportunity to choose from the wealth of styles on today's home furnishings market! You've got a chance to change your life style and make your surroundings a bright reflection of your own personality.

Shopping for furniture is fun. But it's only fun if you know that you're getting the very best for your money. And you can do it if you try. As a furniture consumer, you're a V.I.P. Furniture dealers and manufacturers are out to please you. And you have a perfect right to demand high quality, reflected in durable, beautiful materials, sound construction, and top-notch styling.

When you go to buy your new furniture, remember that while most furniture is of good quality, some things you will see on the retail floor are not representative of true value. If you are displeased with the workmanship and materials, don't hesitate to complain to the store. If you and millions of other consumers demand what you pay for, you'll be in a better position to get it. For example:

•If you have ever purchased a piece of furniture with a plastic surface that has been printed to look like wood and have found that this piece has failed to live up to expectations, be certain that the new furniture you buy is made of genuine hardwood. Look for tags which tell you that a piece is made of real hardwood or inspect the surface of the furniture for a distinctive figure pattern. Printed wood surfaces have a decided repeat grain that does not successfully imitate the varied patterns of genuine hardwood.

•When buying upholstered pieces, look for real hardwood frames. If you do not like the quality of the fabric on an expensive sofa or chair, let the dealer know your feelings.

Today in U.S. history

Today is Sunday, July 18, the 200th day of 1976. There are 166 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in the year 64 A.D., the Great Fire of Rome began. The legend is that Emperor Nero set the fire and fiddled as the city burned.

On this date:

In 1792, the American naval hero, John Paul Jones, died in poverty in Paris.

In 1914, the U.S. Army created an aviation section within the Signal Corps, and six planes were provided for air training.

In 1964, thousands of blacks rioted in New York's Harlem after the shooting of a young black by a white policeman.

In 1969, a car driven by U.S. Senator Edward Kennedy plunged off a bridge into a tidal pool on Chappaquiddick Island, Mass. The body of Mary Jo Kopechne was found in the car.

In 1971, the government of South Vietnam proposed that North and South Vietnam call a cease-fire and a country-wide general election on reunifcation.

Ten years ago: South Africa declared it would continue control of South West Africa after a World Court dismissed a suit brought by black-ruled African states.

Five years ago: The army in Jordan pinned down the battered remnants of a Paletinian guerrilla movement in a drive against the guerrillas.

One year ago: Gov. Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania announced that he was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for U.S. President.

Today's birthday's: Astronaut John Glenn is 55 years old. Comedian Red Skelton is 63.

Thought for today: This is the final test of a gentleman — his respect for those who can be of no possible service to him — William Lyon Phelps.

Burt Reynolds plays a moonshiner with class in 'Gator'

United Artists' "Gator" is a Levy-Gardner-Laven production in which Burt Reynolds plays the title role of Gator McKlusky, a moonshiner of considerable grace, class, courage and sardonic humor.

Gator operates a still in a remote southern swamp and has an uncanny knack for getting himself in and out of hazardous situations. He is a rebel and a non-conformist, laughing his way through life as though it were a joke whose punchline he already knew.

The picture is a memorable one for Reynolds as it marks his film debut as a director as well.

An action-adventure drama laid against a mosaic of chase sequences, "Gator" is the sequel to "White Lightning," one of the most spectacular boxoffice hits in the history of United Artists, a film which marked the introduction of Burt Reynolds as moonshiner Gator McKlusky.

"Gator" was filmed in color and Todd-AO by one of Hollywood's crack cinematographers, William Fraker. Jules V. Levy and Arthur Gardner are the producers and the original screenplay was written by William Norton, a versatile and talented writer who also did the screenplay for "White Lightning."

Jerry Reed, Lauren Hutton, Jack Weston and Alice Ghostley co-star. Miss Hutton plays a TV newscaster who falls in love with Reynolds. Reed, a top star in the country music world is uniquely cast as a ruthless heavy in the film. Weston portrays an undercover agent, and Miss Ghostley enacts the pivotal role of a social crusader. TV's popular talk show host Mike Douglas makes his film debut in a brief but key role, that of an ambitious governor with aspirations to run for the presidency.

Briefly, the story of "Gator" concerns itself with the heroic efforts of its title character, who has been enlisted by a U.S. Department of Justice agent, to help gatner evidence to convict Bama McCall, a dangerous and deadly political boss responsible for the vast crime and corruption flourishing in Dunston City. He has the mayor and the police department in his hip pocket and he is draining enormous sums of money from gambling, prostitution, drug pushing and many other illegal activities. With the help of a relentlessly persistent TV reporter and a spunky social crusader, Gator finally gets the needed evidence, but not before he runs into one hair-raising situation after another and thwarts a number of attempts on his life.

The events leading up to the surprising climax, unfold with stunning speed, and the skill and dexterity which Gator employs against the wiles and cunning of the evil Bama McCall and his motley group of extortionists and killers, make for marvelous moments on the screen.

Silent movie

The only sound is audience laughter

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Lunch is for people who don't make me nervous," says Mel Brooks, explaining why he refuses people who say, "Let's have lunch — I got a great idea for you."

"Then I met this guy Ron Clark at a party at Larry Gelbert's ("MASH") house. He cowrote a play I really admired, 'Norman, Is That You?' and I liked his personality. He was good-natured, not cranky, the kind of writer I could work with.

"Ron was the 10,000th person to tell me, 'Let's have lunch — I got a great idea.' This time I accepted."

Brooks was underwhelmed. He had considered the notion before, discarded it. Clark continued: a silent film comedy in color, taking place today, filled with superstars. Brooks bought.

The result is "Silent Movie," now convulsing audiences at selected theaters from coast to coast (Brooks does the selecting; he thinks his comedy plays better in theaters under 800 capacity). The new film may well eclipse "Blazing Saddles" and "Young Frankenstein" in international appeal.

"I decided that this kind of a picture should be written the way we did 'Show of Shows' for TV — with writers sitting together and exchanging ideas," said the film maker. He and Clark were joined by two writers of "The Carol Burnett Show" — Rudy DeLuca and Barry Levinson.

'Because I couldn't pay them enough to quit Burnett, we had to meet at lunchtime at a delicatessen," Brooks related. "We took along a tape recorder so we wouldn't lose a single thought.

"When the tape was transcribed the gags were interspersed with sentences like 'I'll have the pastrami, hold the mustard,' and 'Who ordered the cole slaw?'

"I hired a German code expert to sort out the script ideas from the lunch orders."

They developed a zany tale about an over-the-hill director who seeks a comeback by making a silent film with today's superstars. Who could play such a role?

"You'd be perfect," Clark told Brooks. "Our hero is manic, arrogant, strong, silly, wacky."

"Am I like that?" Brooks asked unhappily.

Brooks was finally convinced. Next he had to sell the project to 20th Century-Fox, where he has a three-picture contract.

"The executives stared at me, just as Sid Caesar (as the studio boss in the film) stares at me when I propose a silent movie," Brooks recalled. "It meant reconditioning the audience to read instead of just hearing. They did some serious thinking about it, then said, 'Go ahead.' They approved the movie but not the script; there's no way you could tell from the script how the movie would turn out.

"They just told me, 'If anyone can pull it off, you can.'"

Singer-composer heavy in action

Singer and guitar wizard Jerry Reed, who plays one of the most despicable heavies in screen annals, Bama McCall, in "Gator," Reed made his film debut with Burt Reynolds in "W.W. and The Dixie Dancekings," and he was so good in it that Reynolds cast him in the much more demanding role in "Gator."

Reed, one of the most popular and exciting stars among the new breed of Nashville artists, first came to broad national attention as a regular television guest star on the Glen Campbell Goodtime Hour. In 1972, he hosted his own summer variety show on CBS-TV and was honored with a Grammy Award as Top Country Vocalist for "When You're Hot, You're Hot." The previous year, the Country Music Association nominated him for six awards, partially inspired by his big hit record, "Amos Moses."

Among his recent top-selling discs are "Crude Oil Blues" and "Lord, Mr. Ford." He has written over 250 songs, including hits for some of the hottest names in music. Johnny Cash scored with Reed's "A Thing Called Love," while Elvis Presley added to his legendary laurels with "Guitar Man" and "U.S. Male." A number of Reed tunes were also winners for Tom Jones, Engelbert Humperdinck and Glen Campbell. Reed and Prisilla Mitchell of Marietta, Georgia, married in 1959 and live in Nashville with their two daughters, Seidina and Charlotte. Naturally, he has written the title tune for "Gator."

Jules V. Levy and Arthur Gardner are the producers of "Gator" and the original screenplay was written by William Norton. Burt Reynolds directed and stars in the title role.

Morey Amsterdam, Rose Marie plan return to T.V.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Comedian Morey Amsterdam wrote jokes for Will Rogers at the age of 15 and is busy now, at age 61, plotting a return to television with actress Rose Marie.

"It'll be a continuation of the Dick Van Dyke Show but this one might take place in an ad agency," he said in a recent interview.

Amsterdam and Rose Marie, whom he has known since she was 14, became familiar to millions of Americans as Buddy and Sally, a pair of comedy writers on the "The Allen Brady Show," a television series within a television series, "The Dick Van Dyke Show".

Amsterdam says his new TV series is still in the planning stages, just one of many kettles on his stove.

This fall his "cook book for drunks" titled "Betty Cooker's Crock Book" will be published.

"I did this as a joke," he said. "Whenever I was in Europe I noticed that 90 per cent of the meals were made with some kind of booze in them so I got the idea and started collecting the different recipes. And you know what's funny, I don't even drink."

About 150 "drunk jokes" will be interspersed between the recipes.

Also to be published this fall will be Amsterdam's "Celebrity Diet Book", a collection of the favorite diets of top celebrities.

"I'd just finished my other book and I was sitting in my publisher's office and he said, 'Well, what do you have for us now?' Well, I said, 'What's a sure-fire book?' And he said 'Anything with the word diet in it,'" Amsterdam explained.

"Well, I thought, celebrities are always watching their weight. You've got to remember, on television you put on 20 pounds immediately. It's something about the medium."

So Amsterdam collected the diets of 125 celebrities, many of them friends, and packaged them for publication.

In addition to the publishing projects, Amsterdam is the mastermind behind two other television series. One — "Can You Top This," already syndicated nationally — is based on the old radio show that featured top comics telling jokes. The other project is an animated version of the Marx Brothers antics.

Also in the works is an autobiography entitled "I Remember Me" which Amsterdam hopes to have completed within two years.

Morey said it will trace his career from its start at 14, when he had his first taste of vaudeville. His older brother was a pianist on the vaudeville circuit. When a comic in the troupe fell ill, he asked Morey to fill in. Morey obliged.

"At 15 I was writing for Will Rogers," Morey continued proudly. "Later on, throughout the years, I wrote for all the great American comics — Bob Taylor, Milton Berle, Danny Thomas, Bob Hope and Red Skelton."

Amsterdam was a natural for his role in the popular TV series. Producer Carl Reiner was after a real gag writer to play a gag writer.

EX-MONKEE 'NESMITH' WRITES MUSIC AND BOOK "THE PRISON"

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — It's a giant step from the jangly strains of "Last Train to Clarksville" to the stark white multimedia package of book and music called "The Prison."

But Michael Nesmith has been surprising people ever since his commercially successful group, The Monkees, faded from the limelight.

The group, Nesmith and three other yung men, had soared to fame with a string of hit records and a successful television show named for the group that featured its zany antics.

Nesmith says the group never had true control over its own work. He first shook up fans by telling a magazine reporter 10 years ago that the Monkees didn't play their own instruments.

Later, on his own, Nesmith recorded six articulate but relatively unsuccessful albums, and he appeared headed for a quiet, unnoticed end.

But ex-Monkee Nesmith, once the object of adoration for hordes of howling fans, was not ready to give up on his career.

He moved to the California coastal community of Carmel south of here and with his wife, Kathyrn, set up Pacific Arts Corp., a company with two records to its credit that seeks to teach the young artist of the wiles and pitfalls of corporate artistic control.

"Pacific Arts grew out of my experience in Los Angeles with various people involved in the corporate handling of raw artists and materials," he said in an interview.

"I was very intrigued with what appeared to be the problem between what an artist was doing and what the corporation would actually do with his work," the 33-year-old singer said.

"The Prison" is Nesmith's allegorical attempt to illustrate his feelings on artistic freedom. The music is good by itelf, but works even more effectively as a soundtrack to the 68-page book illustrated with drawings by youngsters from nearby Monterey.

"The idea is that when you read a book you play it like a movie in your mind," he said. "The music is like a soundtrack to that mental movie."

Pacific Art's second album is by a group called Kaleidoscope. They are the first — but not the last, Nesmith hopes — to benefit from Pacific Art's unique contract.

"The kind of contract we offer is so different that it would strike major firms as lunacy," he said.

The contract provides such unusual features as nonexclusivity, control of the master recording by the artist, quantity discounting for sales to distributors, payment of royalites for all records sold and a pledge that the record will always be available for sale.

Perhaps the key is permitting the artist to maintain control of the master copy, Nesmith said. This permits him to maintain artistic control of the ultimate package and makes him a part of the entire creative process, instead of cutting him out after the performance is recorded, Nesmith feels.

TOUCH HISTORY AND PREVIEW THE FUTURE

The Zero Gravity machine gives visitors the weightless experience of floating in space beneath the towering 200' Saturn 1-B, landmark of earth's largest space museum, the Alabama Space & Rocket Center.

The most exciting history laid down in America's pages was the launching and safe return of men from the moon. It's history you remember, and it's history you can see and touch at the Alabama Space and Rocket Center, earth's largest space museum, in Huntsville, Alabama.

The Space Center is a place where you can touch the real spacecrafts that flew astronauts, and experience the same sensations they felt while traveling in space. A Zero-Gravity machine gives each visitor the weightless experience of "floating" as if in space, and spaceship Lunar Odyssey awaits to take would-be astronauts on a flight to the moon.

Lunar Odyssey launches its 46 passengers outside the earth's gravitational pressure — which reaches 2 g's during flight — and into position for a soft landing on the lunar surface. Astronauts who have tried it say it's the next best thing to being there.

These are not the only astronaut activities for you at the Space and Rocket Center. You can inspect a real moon rock and crystals grown in outer space, touch the actual Apollo 16 capsule that took these astronauts to the moon, and fire a live rocket engine.

Or you can visit with the first female in space, Monkeynaut Baker. Since her historic flight in 1959, she has lived with her companion, Big George, and now greets visitors daily at the Space and Rocket Center.

You'll be surrounded by the equipment of the astronaut's world. Everything from a heart monitor, moon buggies, and space suits you can touch, to a life-size lunar landing module, moon crater and the Apollo Saturn V moon rocket stretching longer than a football field.

All the other full-size rockets and missiles towering above the Space Center are history you can touch, too. The early Redstone, Mercury, Jupiter and Saturn rockets have been recently joined by a mockup of the still-orbiting Skylab space station. The Space Center wants you to see the real thing. And there are no "Don't Touch" signs around.

The nearby solar furnace and solar collecting panels are part of the ever-expanding scope of the Space Center. The coffee you drink in the Snack Bar will soon be heated by solar energy.

While you're dreaming of the future, board the bus at the Space Center and tour NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center, where engineers and scientists are creating tomorrow's space adventures right now. You can walk through yesterday's dreams — the Skylab Space Station where astronauts trained and explore the future in laboratories where Space Shuttle and an experimental Solar House are being developed.

So celebrate the Bicentennial by touching the youngest antiques in American history — at the Alabama Space and Rocket Center, just off Interstate 65 in Huntsville, Alabama.

Today's average daily hospital bill — $128!*
That's what the American Hospital Association estimates it cost to spend a day in the hospital in 1975. An increase of nearly 300% during the last 10 years . . . an average increase of 30% a year!! And experts say there's no end in sight. So even if you have a group or individual policy now, don't wait to find out what far too many Americans have discovered the hard way — that yesterday's health insurance is probably anything but adequate for today's exploding hospitalization costs.

Americare® Hospitalization Compensation can be a big help . . . benefits paid in addition to any other benefits you may receive.
This policy pays $60 a day for hospitalization due to covered sicknesses and accidents. And you receive benefits on top of any other benefits you may receive from any other source . . . even Workmen's Compensation or Medicare.

Benefits begin the very first day.
Unlike many policies that don't cover sickness until after 3, 5, or even 7 days of hospitalization, this policy provides benefits from the very first day you're hospitalized for either a covered accident or sickness . . . for as long as 365 days.

Checks sent directly to you.
And you're free to use them in any way you see fit. Of course, if you choose, you may assign them directly to your hospital or doctor.

No physical exam necessary.
Your answers to the brief questions on the application determine your insurability.

Guaranteed renewable for life.
As long as premiums are paid, you can never be cancelled because of age, a change in your health, or the number of claims you have. Nor can you be singled out for a rate increase. In fact, the only way your rates can ever be affected is if the same change is made for all policyholders in your class.

The time to protect yourself is NOW . . . before an accident or illness strikes.
The latest authoritative figures show that 50% of the families in the U.S. — one out of every two — will have someone in the hospital this year. And with odds like that, it doesn't pay to take chances!

We'll send you a free gift just for taking the time to find out about our Americare Hospitalization Compensation Policy.
Fill in the postage-paid reply card and mail it today. You'll receive a special FREE GIFT along with full details of the coverage and information on how you can apply for the timely, sensible protection of this $60-A-DAY hospital policy. Complete details regarding exclusions, reductions or limitations, and terms under which coverage can be continued will, of course, also be provided.
